MADE NEW RECORD

Henry Farman Flew 237 Miles in Eight Hours.

[Associated Press.]

Etampes, France, Dec. 18. — Henry Farman, competing for the Michelin cup today, made a remarkable flight of eight hours and thirteen minutes. Owing to a fierce north wind, however, his progress was slow and he covered only 436 kilometres (287 miles), against 465 kilometres made by Maurice Tabureau on Oct. 28, in a similar competition.

Farman, deceived by the applause of the spectators, believed that he had beaten the distance record and descended. He was greatly disappointed to find that he had not equalled the former record.

Tabureau occupied six hours in his flight, for the Michelin cup, which is awarded annually to the aviator making the longest sustained flight within the year. A premium of $4,000 goes to the winner.

HUSBAND IN JAIL WIFE STARVES

Her Death Is Penalty of His Attempt to Steal 50 Cents For Food.

DISCOVERED TOO LATE

Detroit Woman Raves Like a Maniac When Informed of Terrible Tragedy.

Detroit, Dec. 17.—One of the most pathetic tragedies that has ever come to the notice of Detroit police, was discovered today when Mrs. Stanley Doline died in St. Mary's Hospital of starvation and neglect.

She and her two small children had been without sufficient food and warmth since her husband, Stanley Doline, was lodged in jail last Monday.

The police took her from a sick bed in the basement at 466 Brush street, and rushed her to St. Mary's Hospital, where she succumbed a few hours later.

Judge Phelan learned of the circumstances surrounding the case a few hours after the woman's death and holding a night session in the recorder's court had Doline brought before him. The judge released him, to appear at the opening of the next term of court. Sen. James A. Murtha furnished a bond of $100.

Doline was taken before Judge Phelan last Tuesday to be arraigned on a charge of accosting a woman on Lafayette boulevard and snatching a purse containing 50 cents. He pleaded not guilty. His wife was in the court room with the children at the time. When she learned that her husband would have to go back to jail to remain until the date set for his trial, she grew hysterical, fainted on the floor and had to be carried to the city physician's office.

Locks Herself in Basement.

When she regained consciousness the doctors say a great change appeared to come over her. She raved, shook her hands in angry demonstration in the faces of the officers she met on her way out of the building and went to the county jail, where she demanded to be permitted to see her husband. She was in such a state of mind that it was thought advisable not to grant her demand.

Then she went home and locked herself in the basement, where, since their arrival in Detroit from Boston, they have called two ill-furnished rooms their home. The cupboard was empty, likewise the coal bin, and she was too weak to attempt to provide either. In the tailor shop upstairs she heated two paving bricks, took the children and went to bed.

Police Force the Door.

With the fires dead, the basement became so cold that the water pipes broke. The accident was noticeable upstairs and the tailor summoned a plumber. When the latter came he found the basement door locked. Repeated rapping brought no response. Through a window it could be seen that the basement floor was flooded. The door was forced and Mrs. Doline was discovered almost unconscious and the two children so weak from cold and hunger that they couldn't even cry.

The police ambulance-patrol was called and the woman was rushed to the hospital. At a glance the physicians saw that she was beyond hope of recovery. Once in a while she would call for her husband, but her English was broken and she couldn't make them understand that he was behind iron bars in the jail but a block away.

And there she died. Died with no one at her bedside but a nurse, a doctor and a sister. She did not know the end was coming and her last breath was drawn with an expression of hope, mumbled feebly, that her husband would not be forced to undergo punishment for an offense he had committed against the law in order to obtain money to purchase food.

When City Physician Edmund Quad; broke the news of the wife's death to Doline, the man became raving mad. He tore at his hair and throwing himself on the floor began to batter his head on the stone flagging. It required the united efforts of five deputy sheriffs and the doctor to overcome the man and prevent him from doing violence to himself.

"She Starved to Death."

"She never would have died if they hadn't locked me in this place," he wailed in broken English. "Oh, it can't be true. She isn't dead. But if she is dead the police are to blame. My God, think of it. She starved to death while I was locked behind the stone walls of this awful place."

When the officers would show signs of releasing the man he would immediately begin to pound his head on the floor and the doctor ordered him held down until he became rational, fearful that in his raving condition he might fracture his skull.

At length he was quieted to some extent and placed on his feet. He continued to sob out maledictions upon the heads of the police. He was taken back to his cell and placed under the care of two Polish prisoners, who spoke his tongue and who were instructed to prevent him from harming himself.

Later he was taken to the morgue.

Dragged From the Room.

At the first sight of the face of his dead wife, Doline lost all control of himself. He fell on his knees beside the body, kissed the lifeless lips and brushed back the long black hair, murmuring incoherent words. He had to be dragged from the room by sheer force.

Outside the morgue, those who had accompanied him, took up a collection to defray the burial expenses, and Undertaker James Hayes will have charge of the funeral arrangements. Judge Phelan gave the man $5, and Patrolman John Schumacker took him to the Alma Hotel, where he was given quarters for the night. Tomorrow he plans to go to the Florence Crittenton Home, where his children, one and three years of age, were taken when the mother was removed to the hospital.

DEAD MAN IDENTIFIED.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—The County Police Department today received from the firm of Bassett and Smith, contractors of Sarnia, a telegram saying that Hans Brinkman, whose body was found on the tracks of the Grand Trunk Railway, was in their employ from November 11 until December 15.
