

SIX

CURED OF THIS HORRIBLE DISEASE SCUTAR HAS SURRENDERED, SAYS A BELGRADE DISPATCH

Edmonton Girl Saved By "Fruit-a-tives"

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 2, 1911.

"I had been a sufferer from babyhood with that terrible complaint, Constipation.

"I have been treated by physicians and have taken every medicine that I heard of, but without the slightest benefit. I concluded that there was no cure for this horrible disease.

"Finally, I read of 'Fruit-a-tives' and decided to try them, and the effect was marvellous.

"The first box gave me great relief, and after I used a few boxes, I found that I was entirely well.

"'Fruit-a-tives' is the only medicine that ever did me any good for Chronic Constipation and I want to say to all who suffer as I did—Try 'Fruit-a-tives'—why suffer any longer when there is a perfect cure in this great fruit medicine.

"MISS E. A. GOODALL.

"'Fruit-a-tives' is the only remedy in the world made of fruit, and the only one that will completely and absolutely cure Constipation.

"Fifty cents a box, or $2.50, trial size, 25c. All dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

NO MORE COAL OIL FOR COUNTY JAILS

Prisons Department Says the Counties Must Install Electric Lights.

[Canadian Press.]

Toronto, Dec. 30.—The use of coal oil in the county jails must be prohibited. Today the prisons branch of the provincial secretary's department sent out a letter to jailers of county jails that its use will not be permitted, and directing attention to the regulations which require counties to install electric light in all such buildings, and in the homes of the turnkey and jailer.

A few days ago in one of the eastern counties a big fire was narrowly averted in the jail when the coal oil lamp, and a stop will be put to the practice at once under penalty of withholding the county grant.

The parsimony of the county officials is largely to blame for the wretched condition in most of the county jails, and the impression prevails among them that anything is good enough for the man or woman who has been unfortunate.

Electrification of the L. and P. S. R. must be proven to be best for the city's road before Ashplant, Bennett, Blandford, Johnston, Richter and Robinson will support it. Vote for them.

PEACE CONFERENCE AGAIN ADJOURNS

Course of Negotiations May Be Influenced By Reassembling of Commons.

London, Dec. 30.—After a sitting lasting only a little over one hour, the conference adjourned again until Wednesday.

London, Dec. 30.—It is expected here that the course of the peace negotiations may be influenced by the reassembling of the German foreign secretary, Alfred von Kiderlen-Waechter, which, coming soon after that of Baron Marshall von Bieberstein, formerly German ambassador at Constantinople, and afterward at London, deprives Turkey of two valuable supporters and convinced upholders of the maintenance of the Empire, on the other hand this may prove an advantage for the allies, as Kiderlen-Waechter was supposed to be the instigator of the Austro-Hungarian armistice on the frontier.

The second occurrence is the reassembling of the House of Commons today, as, although Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, is determined to maintain Great Britain's strict neutrality, he cannot prevent members of the House asking questions which show the trend of public opinion.

CANADIAN NORTHERN PLANNING NEW LINE

From Orillia to Collingwood and Thence to Goderich Is Latest Move.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Goderich, Dec. 30.—From Orillia to Collingwood and then to Goderich is the next step of the Mackenzie & Mann interests in the development of their Western Ontario network of lines. That application for a charter for the proposed line will come up at the next session of the Dominion House was learned in Canadian Northern circles in Toronto recently.

Among the recent festivities was a very pleasant dance given by Mrs. Seager and Mrs. John Galt to introduce Miss Grace Seager and Miss Margaret Galt. About a hundred people were present. The Odellville hall, which it was held, was most artistically decorated. The debutantes looked charming in gowns of white satin, and carried pink roses. Miss Proudfoot wore a maise gown; Miss Elliot, a gray chiffon over white; Miss Corbion, pink chiffon over pink satin; Miss Ansebrook, pale green satin; Miss Strang, pale pink chiffon; Miss Lewis, white; Miss Kidd, gold-bedecked chiffon over white satin; Mrs. Thomas Frost, white lace over white satin; Mrs. A. Sutherland (Toronto), white satin; Miss Dancy, black lace over black satin; Mrs. Nesbitt, white satin. Among the guests were a number of the married friends of Mrs. Galt and Mrs. Seager. Three favor dances made a pretty and pleasant ending to the dance.

Another enjoyable event was a progressive euchre party given by Mrs. E. N. Lewis.

Mr. Clarence Armistead, of London, is at his home on Britannia road.

Servians Reported to Have Carried the Turkish Fortress, Which For Weeks Has Held Out Against Attack of the Montenegrins.

London, Tuesday, Dec. 13.—The Times this morning gives prominence to the following dispatch from Belgrade:

"It is reported that the ministry of war has received a telegram stating that Scutari has fallen to a Servian attack."

Again Adjourned.

The Turks again succeeded in adjourning the peace conference in St. James' picture gallery. Now the delegates will wait for Wednesday, when there may be some definite action taken on the demands of the allies concerning Macedonia and the Adriatic question.

The Turkish envoys said that they must await instructions from Constantinople before taking any important steps. They intimated, however, through Nizam Pasha that the Turk may be willing to grant the demands of the little States in regard to Macedonia.

Yesterday's conference lasted but an hour. Rehid Pasha, the chief Ottoman delegate, worked all morning with his secretaries over monuments of papers and books, and then took a long walk through London to get into condition for what he described as the arduous duties of the afternoon. M. Novakovich, head of the Servian delegation, and Premier Myaskovitch, of Montenegro, were together at the conference all morning.

Servia the Danger.

Diplomats say that Servia is now the stumbling-block over which the conference is tripping. She will not come to a statement of just what terms she will accept as readily as

Bulgaria, whose delegates feel that that country, bearing the brunt of the fighting, has sacrificed enough, and now desires peace.

Rehid Pasha, who is anxious apparently to have the powers step in again, proposed that the conference proposals be presented Saturday to the powers for mediation. His proposition was received with unanimous approval from the allies' side of the table, and the delegates broke up to meet again Wednesday. It is understood that there have been several private conferences between the Ottoman delegates and the representatives of the allies since Saturday's meeting.

Warning From Powers.

Dispatches from Constantinople indicate that pressure is being brought to bear upon the Porte by their friends among the powers who are advising her to put aside the procrastination tactics that she has uncovered in London, and make peace. The Russian ambassador at Constantinople has added a warning note to his advice saying that delay will complicate the Asiatic situation.

The agitation in the Turkish army for the renewal of hostilities still persists, and the troops are being circulated with instructions to submit to the surrender of Adrianople.

The report that Turkey has succeeded in negotiating a loan in London is discredited here. The brokers say that there is but little chance that the Ottoman could obtain such a loan, and that Turkey has been informed that she may ask for it after peace has been declared, and not before.

Statements Disproved.

The story of the prisoner that he had overstepped on the morning of Dec. 10, the day following the murder, was disproved by Mrs. J. M. Radley, a hotelkeeper, and Lynett Fawcett. Both witnesses declared that Love had been sitting in a hotel room as early as 5 o'clock, and that he appeared as if he had not retired during the night.

Evidence to show that the trousers Love invariably wore during working days had disappeared was given by George B. Croft, a fellow-laborer, who frequently worked with the prisoner. Croft wore a buckle like Love's, and a pair of trousers which were patched about the knees and badly worn. When the officers searched the house for the game, it did not be found.

One of the chief points of Love's defence in his statement, which he made at the time of his arrest, was that there was no blood to be found on his clothes.

The buckle which was found in the stove of the Love home shortly after the prisoner was taken into custody, was identified by Mrs. McLaughlin, for whom the murdered woman worked as a domestic. The buckle was found in a cool, calm voice, and at the conclusion of the hearing shook hands with several friends, smiling as he greeted them.

Throughout the proceedings Love maintained an attitude of indifference. When arraigned he pleaded not guilty in a cool, calm voice, and at the conclusion of the hearing shook hands with several friends, smiling as he greeted them.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

London, Tuesday, Dec. 13.—The Times this morning gives prominence to the following dispatch from Belgrade:

"It is reported that the ministry of war has received a telegram stating that Scutari has fallen to a Servian attack."

Again Adjourned.

The Turks again succeeded in adjourning the peace conference in St. James' picture gallery. Now the delegates will wait for Wednesday, when there may be some definite action taken on the demands of the allies concerning Macedonia and the Adriatic question.

The Turkish envoys said that they must await instructions from Constantinople before taking any important steps. They intimated, however, through Nizam Pasha that the Turk may be willing to grant the demands of the little States in regard to Macedonia.

Yesterday's conference lasted but an hour. Rehid Pasha, the chief Ottoman delegate, worked all morning with his secretaries over monuments of papers and books, and then took a long walk through London to get into condition for what he described as the arduous duties of the afternoon. M. Novakovich, head of the Servian delegation, and Premier Myaskovitch, of Montenegro, were together at the conference all morning.

Servia the Danger.

Diplomats say that Servia is now the stumbling-block over which the conference is tripping. She will not come to a statement of just what terms she will accept as readily as

Bulgaria, whose delegates feel that that country, bearing the brunt of the fighting, has sacrificed enough, and now desires peace.

Rehid Pasha, who is anxious apparently to have the powers step in again, proposed that the conference proposals be presented Saturday to the powers for mediation. His proposition was received with unanimous approval from the allies' side of the table, and the delegates broke up to meet again Wednesday. It is understood that there have been several private conferences between the Ottoman delegates and the representatives of the allies since Saturday's meeting.

The agitation in the Turkish army for the renewal of hostilities still persists, and the troops are being circulated with instructions to submit to the surrender of Adrianople.

The report that Turkey has succeeded in negotiating a loan in London is discredited here. The brokers say that there is but little chance that the Ottoman could obtain such a loan, and that Turkey has been informed that she may ask for it after peace has been declared, and not before.

Statements Disproved.

The story of the prisoner that he had overstepped on the morning of Dec. 10, the day following the murder, was disproved by Mrs. J. M. Radley, a hotelkeeper, and Lynett Fawcett. Both witnesses declared that Love had been sitting in a hotel room as early as 5 o'clock, and that he appeared as if he had not retired during the night.

Evidence to show that the trousers Love invariably wore during working days had disappeared was given by George B. Croft, a fellow-laborer, who frequently worked with the prisoner. Croft wore a buckle like Love's, and a pair of trousers which were patched about the knees and badly worn. When the officers searched the house for the game, it did not be found.

One of the chief points of Love's defence in his statement, which he made at the time of his arrest, was that there was no blood to be found on his clothes.

The buckle which was found in the stove of the Love home shortly after the prisoner was taken into custody, was identified by Mrs. McLaughlin, for whom the murdered woman worked as a domestic. The buckle was found in a cool, calm voice, and at the conclusion of the hearing shook hands with several friends, smiling as he greeted them.

Throughout the proceedings Love maintained an attitude of indifference. When arraigned he pleaded not guilty in a cool, calm voice, and at the conclusion of the hearing shook hands with several friends, smiling as he greeted them.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

LOVE SENT TO TRIAL ON CHARGE OF WIFE-MURDER

Without Hearing Defence Magistrate Commits the Prisoner on Serious Charge—Son Repeats Story Told at Inquest, and Says That Quarrels Between Parents Were Frequent.

Fleetham, Dec. 30.—Henry Love was committed for trial by Magistrate McGill this afternoon on the charge of murdering his wife, Hannah Lucille Love, whose remains were found concealed in the cellar of the Love home in Ceylon on the morning of Dec. 11, after she had been missing for three days.

The hearing was held in the Orange Hall at Ceylon, where the Sunday following the murder the trial was held. The woman was solemnized. The efforts of the prosecution were chiefly devoted towards disproving the story told by the accused, and so strong was the evidence adduced that the prisoner committed the prisoner for trial without hearing his previous statement read.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflinching voice, but without glancing towards his father. Throughout the whole proceedings he sat across the hall from the prisoner, and the two never greeted each other.

The Son's Story.

As at the inquest, the chief witness was Love's 14-year-old son, Arnel. The lad told the same story as previously, but added the fact that serious quarrels between his father and another had frequently occurred. He also said that they were the result of bad business management of Love, more than from his excessive smoking. Arnel said that when these domestic troubles occurred he tried to avoid them by leaving the house. He cited one instance, where his father became so angry that he left the house for a night. In giving his evidence the boy spoke in a clear, unflin