The do stor commenced his discourse by remaring that four distinct reasons have bee a given for the origin of sin in the world : First, that sin is the result of a divine pre-arrangement, the reason of which is found in the elective will and pleasure of the creator. This, however, implicates the divine being by making him find a pleasure. in evil. The second reason is that sin is irresistible—once in existence, forever so. This is an over-statement that does not credit the divine with his own prerogative. A third reason is that sin is the normal and natural state of man. This is also an ex treme statement, and accounts for sin by a defect in creation. The last reason is that sin exists by divine permission, and origin-ated in the creature by reason of his endowments and freedom.

This is the true and consistent one. Sin is made a possibility and a remedy is provided. I prefer to err on mercy's side, if need be; to have a God more loving than a remedy is a consistent one of the prefer to err on mercy's side, if need be; to have a God more loving than the consistency of the prefer to errors. sa age; more good than wise; more merciful than powerful. Through most of the reasons you can see a cowardly spirit. The Calvanist blames God; the Armenian blames the devil, and man himself is spared. Of the two I would rather lay the blame on the devil, although I question if he has anything to de with it. anything to do with it.

All acknowledge, though, that sin is wrong and that but they then meekly set aside the verdict and say that God will not punish anybody, while they acknowledge that the courts of earth execute the judgments of the magistrates. Yet they say "there is no hell. Keep quiet. There's a loose court in heaven!" Will you impeach the integrity of heaven! Will you dare, if there are ten thousand hells, to say that God who judges sin is careless in the execution of his judgments? If you do, you say it against everything IT DESERVES PUNISHMENT, If you do, you say it against everything that is true and reasonable. You would not like to see out courts on such a basis. guilt by peculiar sacrifices. Two-thirds of the people of the world believe in the trans-migration theory—that a man is advanced for good deeds done and set back a few for good deeds done and set back a few stages for evil performed. The society for the prevention of cruelty to animals was started by a donation of $200,000 from a man who believed that some of his friends might be changed into animals of some kind on account of their evil lives, and consequently he wished that they should be free from cruelty and harm. All believe that wrong should be punished. The Jews said, $4 An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth. In the palace of Nebuchadnezzar a tooth. In the palace of Nebuchadnezzar a tooth. When the trump of the archangel is blown and the dead in Christ shall rise and all are changed in the twinkling of an eye, what a sight! The judgment day will be a solemn occasion, because we are to stand to be judged—to stand with all the world from Adam to the last man. THE MAYORALTY QUESTION.

Mr. A. R. Boswell was formally declared mayor of Toronto at Osgoode hall on Saturday morning by Mr. Dalton, Q.C., before whom the recount was held. Counsel on both sides were present to hear the decision, n giving which Mr. Dalton entered at length into the disputed question of allowing ballots marked with single straight lines. He held that there was no substanlines. He held that there was no substantial difference between the Canadian and English acts, and on common sense grounds as well as following the precedent of the highest court in England he decided that these ballots were admissable. This decision added eleven votes to those for Boswell and three to those for Withrow. The ballots with a cross opposite the words "For Mayor" were disallowed on the ground that the marking left it uncertain for which candidate the vote was intended. The votes for Boswell were increased by 16, and those for Withrow by 5. Of the 201 ballots submitted to the judge, 98 have been allowed for Boswell, 48 for Withrow. The result therefore is: 4298 for Boswell, 4286 for Withrow, giving a majority of 12 for for Withrow, giving a majority of 12 for the mayor. The spoiled ballots were not entered into, Mr. Dalton being of opinion that they could not affect the position.

Facts as they become known show that the two men who plotted the robbery of Maher acted with the most deliberate cunning to extort from him all the money they could possibly obtain, under the plea that they were the friends of his boy. The inquest was begun before Coroner Casgrain at Sandwich yesterday, at which it was developed that Maher was pushed in at the door of the house of a colored man named Williamson near Sandwich. He being in a stupefied condition, Williamson thought him drunk and brought him into gaol on a sled. Here he was cared for as well as possible, but and brought him into gaol on a sled. Here he was cared for as well as possible, but soon died. It is the opinion of Drs. Coventry, Mack and Mignault, who made the post mortem examination, that the liquor given Maher was drugged and that he died from the effects of the drugging. The stomach has accordingly been removed and sent to Toronto for chemical analysis, pending which a verdict will not be reached, though the taking of evidence will be concluded in two or three days. The post mortem examination did not reveal any cause for death, and there is little doubt that the cause will be found in the stomach. At the conclusion of the autopsy the body was delivered up to friends of deceased and taken home to Detroit. The men guilty of this double crime are not yet in custody. this double crime are not yet in custody. There would seem to be little difficulty is identifying them, if captured.
