In the match at New York on Saturday, Princeton won. Cornell's entire team weighed, 1878 pounds. Princeton's eleven was 27 pounds lighter. The weight wasn't evenly distributed, though, and those persons who didn't know any better pitied poor little Balliet, Princeton's centre rusher, when they saw him take his place against Baker of Cornell. Baker is 6 feet 3 inches high and weighs 230 pounds. Balliet weighs but 177. He has a big, square jaw, though, and a mustache that frightens the opposing men, and when the two teams left the field Baker was about as badly used up as any, while Balliet seemed quite fresh. This may seem strange, but in Princeton Balliet has to face a 240-pounder who plays on the second eleven

The expenses in connection with the holding of the annual sports of Toronto University were in excess of the receipts. The Athletic Association has petitioned the council of the University to allow an admission charge to the Queen's-Varsity match on Saturday. The association hopes in this way to put the finances on even terms.

Notes of the Kickers.

Harvard's difficulty is to find heavy men for the centre. Mackey, 204 pounds, is the heaviest. Lewis, the colored player, is down to 175 pounds.
