

are burdens imposed, which may lie beyond the scope of responsibility of competition policy authorities, but surely an awareness of these long-run political costs should inform trade policy and practice and the interface with competition policy considerations.