

to give certificates to a body of teachers who do not come up to the existing requirements. It would not go to the root of the matter and would not in any way increase the efficiency of the school staff, while it would, on the other hand, tend to further disparage the benefits of training in the public mind.

McGill University Montreal,
31st January, 1906.

W. P.