

The cold,
The slow, slow cold,
That creeps up wtheringly through the flesh, Chilling the pale warm bloom, blurring the gold,
Freezing to quiet the once eager limbs
With heavy cold, the dull white cold of death.