Such a league would be far more compact than the present Eastern League, and it is believed would become very popular and profitable.-Hamilton Herald. THE AMATEURS.

We know nothing of the trials, sorrows and temptations of those around us, of pillows wet with sobs, of the lifetragedy that may be hidden behind a smile, of the secret cares, struggles and worries that shorten life and leave their mark in hair prematurely whitened, and in character changed and almost recreated in a few days. We say sometimes to one who seems calm and smiling, "You ought to be supremely happy; you have everything that heart could wish." It may be that at that very moment the person is passing alone through some agony of bite into the lips in the attempt to keep their feelings under control, when life seems a living death from which there is no relief. Then these light, flippant phrases jar upon us, and we seem as isolated and separated from the rest of humanity as if we lived on another planet. Let us not dare to add to the burden of another the pain of our judgment. If we would guard our lips from expressing, we must control our mind, we must stop this continual sitting in judgment on the acts of others, even in private. Let us by daily exercises in self-control learn to turn off the process of judging-as we would turn off the gas. Let us eliminate pride, passion, personal feeling, prejudice and pettiness from our mind, and higher, purer emotions will rush in, as air seeks to fill a vacuum. Charity is not a formula; it is an atmosphere. Let us cultivate charity in judging; let us seek to draw out latent good in others rather than to discover hidden evil. It requires the eye of charity to see the undeveloped butterfly in the caterpillar. Let us, if we would rise to the full glory of our privilege, to the dignity of true living, make for our watchword the injunction of the supreme charity of the world-"Judge not."

SOMETHING TO QUARREL OVER. Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonder-"I see that two Frenchmen have fought a duel over whether Hamlet was fat or lean?"

"Well," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes, "I suppose there had to be illfeeling in the company over something And as it was a Shakespearean play there probably wasn't much chance to quarrel over the box receipts."-Washington Star.

Many London women are enjoying great contentment in their kitchen work, owing to the use of GAS FOR COOK-ING. They are the smiling, should have perfect liberty to organize, pleasant women, whose work is quickly accomplished without heat or trouble, who have time to pass daily a few agreeable hours in recreation or amusement. They are far in advance of their unfortunate sisters, who obstinately adhere to the coal or wood stoves. Hadn't you better consider what GAS FOR COOK

FRENCH COLONIES. They Are a Failure Compared With Angle-Saxon Ones.

The French cannot colenize, and they know it. Their population 18, to moderately, stagnant. In 50 years' time the laws of nature will have reduced them to the rank of a second-rate power, unless they meanwhile adopt and act upon the device, "Liberte, egalite, maternite." Meanwhile they have not a surplus population to be employed in colonizing. Their colonies are not even selfsupporting. Leaving out Algeria, they cost the republic 100,000,000 francs a

And concerning Algeria, one of the few Frenchmen who regard these questions in the light of plain facts, G. Garreau, writing in The Siecle a few days ago, makes the painful confession:

'During well nigh 70 years we have failed to make Algeria pay. Have we even striven to make it? During 20 years we have been pursuing Ahmadon or Samory. What have we done with the Soudan? We have contributed to depopulate it; we have made waste, directly or indirectly, immense territories, on which a rich population formerly lived; we have extended the desert instead of reclaiming it. Our soldiers have labored so well that they successfully thwarted all useful besorrow, where the teeth seem almost to ginnings, and blocked the road to the pioneers of our commerce."-Contemporary Review.

Endless Chain Propeller.

A western man has designed an endless chain propeller for boats in which a double chain of buckets is hung on two shafts extending crosswise through the boat, with power transmitted to the shafts by piston rods attached to a crank section in the center of each shaft.

LIFE SAVED-Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented te a trial, as I was reduced to such state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me rood.
