Jimmy Michael is now in Europe, but and will probably do some riding on the winter tracks, although it is now believed that he really intends to become a jockey, and will take a mount next spring.

Montreal expects to hold an international bicycle meet right after the national meet, wherever that may be held, and the Canadian promoters hope Boston will be the place, as that would Harris. mean a big list of American riders at

The ambition of the enthusiastic wheelmen of Pennsylvania has been at last accomplished. This week the membership of that division is greater than that of New York, which now stands in second place. The total membership of the League of American Wheelmen today is 78,077. Pennsylvania has 17,792, and New York, 17,686. Massachusetts is third.

Speaking of the bicycle, Dr. Sarah H. Stevenson says: "No class of people is in greater need of the benefits of the bicycle than is the laboring class. Besides the harmonious muscular development it brings something equally precious, diversion, pleasure. Instead. then, of converting all the bicycle riders into laborers—desirable as that surely would be—I should convert all laborers into bicycle riders, both for their own good and for the good of their work."

A good plan to preserve a wheel if one does not intend to ride during the winter months is to suspend it from the ceiling, where it will be out of the way. and the tires relieved of supporting the weight. Tickets for seats in the immediate vicinity of the ring brought fabulous prices. The original cost was $20 each, but last night twice that sum could not other tickets, costing from $5 to $15, brought prices increased two or threefold, and the club management did not put any of the $3 admission tickets on sale. In some cases $8 was paid for the privilege of standing up at the extreme ends of the building. gambling instinct was in evidence as soon as the sports began to gather. Corbett's stock was always in preference, and the odds on the big Californian opened at 100 to 80. One wellknown member of the Produce Ex-change took the Sharkey end of one of the largest wagers of the night, which was $1,500 to $1,300 on Corbett. Cor-Bon Jour 3. Time, 1:21.

A SURPRISE.

The affair ended in a most disgraceful fizzle. Corbett had all the worst of the encounter, when one of his seconds, Connie McVey, jumped into the ring, appealing to the referee, thus violat-ing the rules, and the referee, "Hon-John Kelly, had no alternative but to disqualify Corbett and to award the bout to Sharkey.

Sharkey was very confident of success, and the manner in which he acquitted himself in the ring while the fight lasted, showed very plainly that Washington, Nov. 32.—Summaries at his confidence was founded on good grounds. Sharkey's quickness and aggressiveness were astonishing from the beginning, and from the first it was seen that he held Corbett safely. In the second round there were wild. yells from the admirers of the Irishman, when he floored Corbett with a right swing on the nead, which was preceded with a powerful blow on the body. It was 2 to 1 on Sharkey after the second round. In the ninth round Corbett seemed to be stronger than at any time during the fight, but is was evident that he was slowly but surely fading under Sharkey's onslaughts, and had McVey not interfered the sailor would undoubtedly have won

THE PRELUDE.

In the first of the two preliminary bouts the principals were two local boxers — Jack Sullivan and Charley Schultz—and were announced to go ten rounds. The men had hardly shaped themselves for the seventh, when Sullivan was knocked out.

The second preliminary bout brought

Kid Harris, of Chicago, and Charley Roden, of Jersey City, to-gether. When Roden went to his corner in the ninth it was found that his jaw was broken, and the referee stopped the bout and awarded the fight to

THE FIASCO.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the fight began. In round 1 Corbett failed to show any of the great cleverness with which he has been credited. The round ended with Sharkey at his man. In round 2 Sharkey sent Corbett down. In succeeding rounds the sailor evidently too much for the Californian. In the ninth and last, clinches were frequent, and the men refused break together. Corbett struck Tom rather low in the body, and the sailor appealed to the referee. Conbett shoved Tom from him, and said, "Oh, you go away." The men were in the center of the ring, mixing it up in the liveliest manner, O'Rourke calling to Tom not to mind Corbett's low hit-Just at this moment, McVey, one of Corbett's seconds. jumped through the ropes, protesting that Sharkey had done something wrong to Corbett. The moment McVey climbed through the ropes Police Inspector Mc-Laughlin grabbed hold of him, while the crowd frantically yelled foul! Corbett loses. Look at his sec-ond in the ring!" Referee Kelly seemed to pay no attention to the matter, but kept looking at the fighters, who con-tinued their aggressive work. McVey tried to pull away from the inspector, while spectators kept yelling at the referee, who finally separated the fighters and ordered them to their corners. Kelly stopped the bout. Meanwhile the spectators stood up and yelled that bets should be declared off, as they believed McVey committed the breach of ring rules inten-It looked for a while as if a riot would ensue, but as soon as the referee declared Sharkey the winner on a technicality, he announced all bets were off, stating that McVey's action was undoubtedly pre-arranged. "IT WAS A FAKE."

New York, Nov. 23.-Statements made by those concerned in the Sharkey-Corbett flasco are as follows: John Kelly, the referee, says: stopped the bout, and gave the cision to Sharkey, because McVey, one of Corbett's seconds, in violation of all rules, jumped into the ring. I called all the bets off, because I believed the action of McVey was paid for by somebody who had bet on Sharkey, and I did not propose to decide public money on a palpable fake. I would not be a party to such a fraud. No one can tell me McVey lost his head. He has been behind fighters for years, and there was some fraudulent deal behind his movement. McVey and Corbett say Sharkey was fighting foul. Sharkey says Corbett struck him once or twice below the belt, but he (Corbett) would have been knocked out in another round or two. Sharkey says he stands ready to fight him or anybody in the world, Fitzsimmons preferred.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking the first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Sold by all druggists at 50 cents and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

A Montreal Man's Story - Another Hunting Fatality in Michigan.

Montreal, Nov. 23.-Mr. George Sinn, of the city ticket office, C. P. R., St. James street, returned to the city on Saturday, after a short business trip to the Temiscamingue district, during which he had a thrilling experience, never to be forgotten. It was in connection with the accidental killing of Mr. Edward Miner, a wealthy manufacturer of Kingsville Ont., highly respected in Montreal and throughout Canada, and the champion pigeon shot of the Dominion. The story of the accident is a particularly Early last week Mr. Miner, his brother, and Mr. Bennett Squire, of Windsor, Ont., set out on a hunting trip, and were soon buried in the woods, 30 miles from Temiscamingue. On Wednesday they commenced the sport. Mr. Squire fired at a fine moose, wounding it, and the enraged animal charged the hunter, who attempted to fire a second time his repeating rifle. Something was wrong, however, and the weapon did not go off.

Seeing the danger of his friend, Mr. Miner stepped forward, and was in the act of raising his rifle to fire at beast, when Mr. Squire's gun went off, the ball passing directly through Mr. Miner's head, and killing him instantly. The brother and unhappy friend became crazed with grief. They were 30 miles from the nearest railway station, and there was absolutely no means whatever of conveying the corpse thither except by carrying it. For 25 miles they carried the body through the terrible wilderness, and, finally, exhausted and half-famished for want of food, they reached the track at a small signal station, seven miles from Temiscamingue station.

Utterly incapable of making another move the two gentlemen sank to the ground, and with the body of friend and brother between them, awaited the coming of assistance. The circumstances were soon explained to I do not know whose light feet tread Mr. Sinn, and as quickly as possible he secured a hand-car and got the corpse and two men on board. got to Temiscamingue it was found that no trains were running, so Mr. Sinn determined to take the party on the car all the way to Mattawa, where the body could be prepared for burial. Getting two men to help him. Mr. Sinn started at the lever, and the fearful journey of 41 miles was commenced. Mr. Squire and Mr. Miner were half beside themselves with menced. grief, and it was with the utmost dif ficulty that Mr. Sinn kept them sufficiently calm to complete the 41 mile run. A hand-car is small for four men to ride upon it, but when an extra man, and a corpse, are added, the dif-ficulty of pumping the lever may be imagined. Then, too, the horror of the ride was heightened by the inky darkness of the night.

As daylight broke Mr. Sinn's efforts increased, and his hands now sho strain to which they were subjected. At last the little car passed a farm house, another and another, and soon the depot was reached.

The news quickly spread through Mattawa, and while kind friends looked after the suffering travelers the Oddfellows took care of the body. I was embalmed and sent to Kingsville for burial. Mr. Miner and Mr. Squire could not find words sufficient to thank

Mr. Sinn for his goodness. He was found at his office this morning, but not in any too good a condition for work. When I asked him about the matter he said: "I have not much to say, I on'y did what I thought to be my duty."

MR. WARMAN'S POEM

A correspondent of The Advertiser

Readers of Mr. Warman's poetry will agree with the remarks in a recent issue of The Advertiser that "Hereafter" is his happiest effort. I think Mr. Warman has here struck a higher note than in any of his previous poems. His theme is not a new one, to be sure "All the stories have been told al-ready," but the tale "ten times told is everlastingly made new by the art of the teller," and Mr. Warman, in a sweet and lyrical vein, muses on thoughts of life beyond the grave in a manner which touches the deepest emotions—that primal requisite of all good with his unsatisfying conclusion. Tennyson, in the "Two Voices," wrestles with the argument that death ends all. He argues that if death does end all, what, then, is that subtle, indefinable suggestion that makes us even doubt it.

"What dreams may come When we have shuffled off this mortal coil."

"Who forged that other influence, That heat of inward evidence. By which he doubte against the sense."

So will we ever match that hope that "inward evidence," that faith in immortality, that come from we know not where, against the evidence of sense. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and yet thou canst not tell whither it cometh or whither it goeth." sense for proof of a future, or as to what it will be like, but appeals to that "something is that something seems," "that heat of inward evidence":

"Dost thou believe that when we take That last, long eleep, a day shall break The dreamless night? Shall we awake? "Tell me with reason in thy thyme,

Dost think there'll be no end of time,

Nor end of bliss in that blest clime?' The answer to this is withal most beautiful. He will not trust to "reason"-itself so frail, so fallible an instrument: "I do not know for sure, I said; Yon shore; or if the dead be dead.

"I've seen the summer birds take wing, When winter comes, and in the spring Come back again to soar and sing.

"I've seen the red rose in the glen, Hid 'neath the hoar frost, die, and then In brighter hours bloom again." Man will be one with one nature; he dies, but shall live again; he shall be sown in corruption and raised in incor-ruption. If there is to be a future in life-and countless thousands believe co-then they should to fashion themselves that. "Where all are good, though many strange.

Thou may'st not feel too great the change.' The thought contained in the last line is certainly a fine one, and justifies the use of the lines, Do unto man thy whole life through

As thou would'st have him do to you," which otherwise would have been open to the charge of the commonplace and hackneyed. Perhaps the best lines in the poem are those beginning, "I do not know for sure, I said," and the two following stanazs.

Mr. Warman has here, as I said before, perhaps struck his highest note. The whole poem is beautiful in its simplicity and melody, and will add to the author's reputation.
