NEW YORK. June 26.—The difference between Bethmann Hollweg's proposal of peace based upon the war map and Kuehimann's suggestion of a settlement based upon the boundaries drawn for Germany by history is a difference of methods merely. Bethmann was a "Durchhauer," who knew of no other method than to hack his way through. Kuehimann belongs to another school. His cutting is done in the back, not in the front. Lichnowsky, seeking in London before the war to establish Anglo-German relations, has supplied ample evidence of how while he worked openly for peace Kuehimann secretly prepared the way for war.

Scretly prepared the way for war.

Turns Sharp Corners.

Kuehlmann had two problems to confront in making his speech. They are the familiar problems of every German statesman who has been permitted to speak upon the subject. He had at one time to satisfy the war party in the saddle for whom peace must be a German peace of the Brest-Litovsk order, and at the same moment to give to the outside world and to the German people a semblance of moderation. The problem was impossible of solution, and Kuehlmann has failed in oil where Bethmann failed in brick. His speech may not satisfy anybody else.

There are two things which Kuehlmann said of immediate interest:

Beiglum Must Come First. MACHIN IS STILL EMPLOYED, WHILE MINISTERS FRET Strong Unionist Paper Calls

Belgium Must Come First.
First—As to Belgium. Belgium re-nains the crucial question, and we hall never listen to any German offer-which raided Paris last night, according to the Petit Parisien's report of the German attempt at an air raid.

It appears, says the Matin there were two groups of Gothas. The greater part of them had to change the direction of their flight because of the vigorous barrage fire, and in the effort to regain their base safely got rid of their bombs rapidly.

It is pointed out that whereas the Germans had made six attacks on Paris by the air route early in June, they had made no attempts upon the city, previous to last night, since the night of June 15-16.
