COST OF PRODUCING MILK IN OXFORD IS $2.17 PER 100 LBS.

Important Figures on Cost of Production.

BRLEVILLE, Jan. 9.—A survey of dairy farms in Oxford County shows the average cost of producing milk for these farms for the year ending Dec. 1 was $2.17 per 100 pounds. The average price received at the farm for milk was $2.19.

making this calculation $500 per year was allowed per man for labor. Thirty per cent of the milk of these farms went to cheese factories, 40 per cent to creameries, and balance to ice cream factories or sale as whole milk. These figures of farms representing ten per cent of the farms of Oxford, show that in this good county, and with a moderate allowance for wages for owner of the farms, milk was sold at about cost of production.

The above statement was made by Lester Leitch at the Eastern Ontario Dairyman's convention in this county. The statement was based on a survey made by Professor Leitch during the last year.

Our Consumers' League Consider the Grocery Man

"I do wish you would write something in your Consumers' column about the thoughtlessness of so many London housekeepers where their grocery is concerned," said a well-known London woman the other day. "I don't say that the stores should all be closed at 6 o'clock on Saturday night, but I do say," she continued, "that some women need to have their eyes opened to their selfishness and what it means to others. They could as easily as not order their Saturday groceries early in the day in order to give the delivery people a chance to get home in decent time. It isn't fair for women to take advantage of the fact that they are customers to telephone in a small order at 8 or 9 o'clock at night and expect it to be delivered."

"This fall, my boy, who is 17 and just through school, wanted to do something to earn money until he really decided what line of work or profession he wanted to take up. He obtained a position with a leading grocer as a kind of extra boy around the place. Sometimes, when it was impossible to send all the orders out by the regular delivery, he made a special trip for the firm. Again and again on Saturday night it was 11:30 o'clock or later when he got home, simply because some thoughtless woman in an outlying district telephoned in an order late in the day by the regular delivery, some little thing that necessitated an extra trip a long distance away from home."

And if the "extra" boy was kept out to that time, what about the regular delivery man? He must be on his job, rain or shine, storm or cold, hunting up numbers that are difficult to find, a real human being, a decent person, whose hardships are vastly increased by selfishness, even if it is "more thoughtless."

Any readers of this page have guilty of the kind of thoughtlessness, the kind which makes grand lads for the grocery man, or the butcher man, or some other provision person, at the close of the day and far into the night, the thoughtless woman who keeps young boys on the street till late hours, and the delivery man racing to get home before Sunday morning, all of a Saturday night?

ORDER FRIDAY.

Why not make a list of the things wanted and order from that list early in the day as possible? To be sure, there are times of sickness in the home and exceptional conditions which make it impossible to be considerate as one might desire. But any grocer will understand this case of emergency and be willing to meet the need. It is the practice of being inconsiderate which wears out patience and is truly unforgivable.

Talking about making out a list, why not where possible, make it on Friday or Thursday to relieve further the Saturday congestion of traffic? Making some one, two or three things have been overlooked on the list, and the need arises for them late in the afternoon or early in the evening, why not carry home something yourself, just for the butcher man, the extra clerk or the delivery man, who would like to have him do unto you if the position were reversed?

Way not start out the new year by doing some thinking from the standpoint of some other people's shoes for a while, instead of narrowing your vision to what you want, when you want it, and what you expect that other people shall do for you?

How would you like to have your boy running around the streets till 11:30 o'clock Saturday night, and the parents cent orders to the city limits, all on account of the lack of consideration of other women?

he submerged with orders late in the afternoon and of an evening on Saturday, orders which might have been distributed over the forenoon and early part of the afternoon?

The Game of Grab.

Ever hear that grey-bearded saying that it is in the little affairs of life in which character betrays itself? Perhaps you heard it so long ago you have forgotten all about it.

It is recalled to you when you see women elbowing and jostling other people aside in order to get to the seat of cars, marching and pushing past others who have been there ahead of them in order to usurp a vacant place, or when someone else is in the waiting for the auto tickets?

When such a woman gets started after what she thinks she should have, irrespective of the rights of others, it is in reality a case of the survival of the fittest, whether or not those pushed aside are small children, mothers with babies in their arms, or old men and women.

Getting in a street car first may mean a seat—but at the expense of someone else who may require it more, or to whose precedence belongs in point of earlier arrival.

The congested street car or "seating capacity only" orders aren't conducive to the best manners, and the seat of people who have a destination to make or an appointment to meet the earliest possible moment. Still, a little courtesy, a little recognition of the rights of others, a little consideration of the rights of others, a little getting on street cars, won't lose any time in the long run. No doubt, other people are in just as much of a hurry as you are, and it is just as much of a game of grab, it is just that it isn't just politeness, it is the thing that makes the difference between a street car, won't lose any time in the long run.
