TAFT AND THE ROOSEVELT

In formally accepting the Republican nomination for the presidency of the United States Mr. William H. Taft delivered a speech of considerable length and comprehensiveness. It had been awaited with some impatience in order that it might be discovered whether and how far, now that his selection is history, he would endorse the identification of his policies with those of President Roosevelt. Any doubt has now been dispelled. Mr. Taft's condemnation of the methods of high finance if more judicial in tone, is as thoro and outspoken as that of the wielder of the big stick. After referring to the wonderful development of the previous ten years the Republican candidate declares that "some prominent and influential members of the community, spurred by financial success and in their hurry for greater wealth, became unmindful of the common rules of business honesty and fidelity, and of the limitations imposed by law upon their action. This became known. The revelations of the breaches of trust, the disclosures as to rebates and discriminations by railways, the accumulating evidence of the violation of the anti-trust law by a number of corporations, the over issue of stocks and bonds on inter-state railways for the unlawful enriching of directors and for the purpose of concentrating control of railways in one management all quickened the conscience of the people and brought on a moral awakening among them that boded well for the future of the country."

Having thus reiterated the president's charges Mr. Taft pronounces a strik- time. ing eulogium on his efforts to achieve a practical reform and for his insistence on high standards of business morality and obedience to law. But Mr. Taft Indicates that President Roosevelt's work is not complete and this part of accused of shop-lifting in the city. It his speech will come with cold comfort to the law-breakers who thought that Mr. Taft would call a halt in the attack directed against them. If the Republican candidate is to be taken at his word, and if he is elected, his little finger will be thicker than his predecessor's loins. For he declares that "the chief function of the next administration is to complete and perfect the machinery by which these standards may be maintained, by which the law-breakers may be promptly restrained and punished, but which shall operate with sufficient accuracy and despatch to interfere with legitimate business as little as possible. Such machinery," Mr. Taft adds, "is not now adequate." And he makes the practical suggestion that the interstate commerce commission should be relieved of its jurisdiction as an executive, directing body and its functions limited to the quasi-judicial investigation of complaints. The executive business of supervising the operation of railways he thinks should be the charge of a department of the government. This is approaching very closely to straight government ownership and operation of the railroads and it shows that if Mr. Taft enters the White House the public interest will continue to be the first consideration of the chief executive of the United States.

An illuminating article on federal politics appears in The Saturday Sunset of Vancouver, B.C. It professes to see signs of the C.P.R. and G.T.P. getting together for the division of the province. The newspapers are being ethoroformed. Not long ago the province switched from Liberal to Conservative—now it deprecates slavish fealty to party, with a suggestion of a coalition of the parties for Dominion forproses. "Does this mean," asks The Sunset, "that the Dominion Government has hitched the C.P.R. and G.T.P. in the west with the Conservative party in British Columbia is to be chloroformed into innocuous desuctude in the coming campaign and has The Province been handed the dope?"

Then it says, the Liberals are in an equally precarious position. The Vancouver World is "showing its teeth," and indicates it will steer an independent course. It demands the nomination of a candidate committed to its complete terms, the all-red and Vancouver a free port.

The Saturday Sunset next gives currency to a report that Sifton will go after the western leadership and has already arrived at an understanding with the C.P.R.
