ball. He is well fixed. Stocks and bonds in his name will bring him enough revenue to free his mind of worry for the remainder of his life. He has worked hard and saved well. Wise investments have taken care of his future and when a man reaches the age of forty-eight he can well figure that he has done his share of athletic campaigning. His only rival in the American League today is Connie Mack. The Philadelphia has won more pennants than Jennings and has been a manager longer in the American League than Hughie has, but outside of the tall and slender tactician of the Athletics, Jennings has the edge on everybody else in Ban Johnson's circuit.

WHAT CITY WOULD LOSE BY REMOVAL OF FILM EXCHANGE. An estimate made by film exchange managers has it that the various exchanges in this city expend within the city annually the sum of $100,000 about different avenues. The owners of the various picture houses in the city are up in arms against the proposed changes of location of the film exchanges. They argue that they will not receive anything like the same service if the exchanges remove to some other centre and that the change will cost them an average of $150 per year each for express charges on films sent them by the exchanges. From a community standpoint they deplore the fact that the city through such a change would be robbed of 150 useful and progressive citizens, which would be felt not only by the moving picture men but the merchants in general here. Under the new set of conditions St. John would cease automatically to be the centre of distribution to the pleasure-seeking people of the maritime provinces, which would have its moral effect at any rate if not to be considered from a mere monetary standpoint.

ROBERT STEAD'S NEW NOVEL. Robert J. C. Stead, in his new novel, "The Cow Puncher" (Toronto, the Musson Book Company, Limited, cloth, $1.50), has written a notable book with a western Canada setting. David Eldon, the cow puncher of the story, grows to young manhood on a ranch in the foothills, outside the influence of church or school. At eighteen he is accidentally thrown into the company of a young eastern girl, who enlightens in him the ambition to be somebody in the world. With this purpose in view, young Eldon leaves the ranch and goes to make his fortune in a young western city. The first night he is swindled out of all his ready cash by a gang of card-sharps, and he takes a job next morning as a coal heaver. For a time it looks as though Dave's course would be downward instead of up, but he fortunately comes under influences which revive his ambition for self-assertion. About this time the big western real estate boom breaks out, and Dave's course is meteoric. His wealth comes quickly and goes as quickly. Following the collapse of the boom a tragedy in his love affairs sends him as an exiled man to France. In the closing chapters is found one of the highest patriotic notes struck by any author during the war.

the book runs a happy vein of humor and philosophy which is not the least of its charms. It is illustrated by Arthur Hemling, a mounted policeman, and is announced by the publishers as an all-Canadian book—Hemling, ex-lumber man and northwest written by a Canadian, and printed and bound in Canada. It should receive a warm welcome from the Canadian reading public. The United States edition is issued by Harpers.

"Unto the least of these" RIVET your eyes on this picture of a Belgian mother and child, until you feel the full horror of the situation! Thousands of these orphans, dying of starvation, might now be living in comfort and plenty, had their soldier fathers not flung themselves into the breach when the Hun invaded Belgium. The fathers died to save us. Are we going to let the orphans starve? Conditions are simply ghastly. The United States loans to the Belgian Government finance the general relief work, but this only provides a bowl of soup and two pieces of bread to each person per day. What is that for a growing child? The Canadian Bureau in Brussels will administer funds, and provide means for getting the ailing children into Holland and into orphanages where they can be saved from a hideous death. Before you sit down to another meal, do SOMETHING for the Belgian children. . . . Make cheques payable and send contributions to Belgian Relief Fund (Registered under the War Charities Act) to your Local Committee, or to Headquarters: 59 St. Peter St., Montreal.
