wards in his profession and many graduated from it into an excentite period in a safer and more remunerative work. All the men who knew him said, "Did you ever see such luck as G. has?" When he made the final step into the desirable niche, just at the time when the paper he had, worked for was crashing into financial ruin, one of the men who had been thrown out of work by the crash, and didn't know where to turn, said to him, "Wel, I gess you were born under a lucky star. It's your luck that that position should turn up right now." "Luck your grandmother," retorted the indignant G. "Turn up nothing. I've been gunning for that position for some time. I can tell you, my friend, that I been a for a to woit for things to turn up. I always have to go out and turn them

"There are undoubtedly such things as unsought opportunities, but they usually come to men who have attracted them by repeated demonstrations of their unus-ual worth. And, as the epigram maker has it, "Most men make more opportunities than they find." After all, home-made opportunities, like a good many other home-made things, are apt to be the best. Make your own opportunities, go put the energy of your dissatisfaction and restlessness into changing conditions, instead of fretting against them, "go out and turn things up" instead of emulating Micawber, and I think you'll be astonished at the progress you will make.
