WIDOW WOULD OPPOSE GRANTING A PARDON FOR HUSBAND'S MURDER

Mrs. Annis Collecting More Evidence Against Capt. Peter Hains in Two-Year-Old Tragedy

New York, Oct. 7.—Angered by reports of the proposed application for the pardon of Captain Peter C. Hains, U. S. A., who is serving a nine-year sentence in Sing Sing for murdering William E. Annis, an advertising man, at the Bayview Yacht Club, in June, 1908, the widow of the dead man has filed with Governor Hughes a vigorous protest against the exercise of any leniency. Since the tragedy, which has been one of the most sensational in the criminal history of the city, Mrs. Annis says she has accumulated much new evidence tending to aggravate the offense and to show that it was inspired by a fanned grievance rather than a wrong against the officer's home. Hains, it will be recalled, offered in extenuation of his crime evidence indicating that Annis had admitted the facts of his wife's obsession with this idea, his counsel contended, he suffered from fits of emotional insanity, in one of which he pumped the contents of an automatic gun into the body of Annis, in the presence of a large crowd of pleasure seekers, at the yacht club.

MME. BERNHARDT SAYS SHE WILL PLAY NEW PART

To Interpret Mephistopheles in New Version of "Faust," Written for Her by Edmond Rostand

London, Oct. 7.—Mrs. Sarah Bernhardt has just created a sensation in her dressing-room at the Coliseum by announcing to a select circle of friends and acquaintances that on her return from America she intends to bring out a new version of "Faust," written expressly for her by Edmond Rostand. Mrs. Bernhardt observed that she had read the manuscript and was much impressed with it. She will play the part of Mephistopheles, and no doubt her rendering of the character will be different to the long list of male impersonators who have hitherto played the part. If her idea of the Prince of Darkness is "a fallen angel" with something of his former self still left in him, as she is reported to have said, this conception of the part will give plenty of scope for Mme. Bernhardt's well-known powers of fascination. It will also be interesting to see how the audience takes such a departure from tradition.

Macpherson got into a row with two Italians, Nicola Saller and Joseph Michelo, and one of them stabbed him with a stiletto. The 17th body has been taken from the ruins.

USE AEROPLANES IN PLACE OF DIRIGIBLES

Berlin, Oct. 7.—Quite suddenly there is a marked disposition on the part of the government authorities to favor the aeroplane and relax interest in the dirigible. This is no doubt due to the recent disasters to the Zeppelins, and it is certain that the military authorities will not make any further use of the dirigibles for scouting purposes. The expense of acquiring a dirigible is too great to bear serious consideration, so the war office has decided to follow the lead of the French and employ only aeroplanes at the future maneuvers. For the flying competition, Paris-Berlin-Brussels-London, that is to take place next spring, one of the aeroplanes will be used. The competition is international and much satisfaction is expressed everywhere at the unexpected news.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT EFFICIENTLY ESTABLISHED

A Graphic Account of the Rising at Lisbon Told by an Eye Witness—Trouble Started With an Inflammatory Placard issued by Republican Newspaper

New York, Oct. 7.—The Associated Press today received direct from Lisbon a dispatch from Senor Bernardo Machado, the minister of foreign affairs in the newly constituted provisional government in Portugal, in which the republican leader set forth the purpose and aims of the present government.

The republic of Portugal has been proclaimed by the army, the navy and the people. The maintenance of order is completely assured. There is general adhesion to the government in the provinces. The enthusiasm of the public is unparalleled. The provisional government has before it a great duty, involving much work. It has in effect a country to make over. Concerning our programme, I can say that we will endeavor to put into operation the programme of the republican party. This includes a policy of decent realization, both in the financial and in the administrative part of the government of the colonies. The financial budget is to be equalized in the general interests of the country and it will be made up with honesty and fairness. The nation's wealth will be developed. All national alliances now existing will be respected and friendly with other states are still desired. Public instruction will be completely secularized, relieved from religious control and the religious congregations will be suppressed. We propose the establishment of a broad system of public instruction both primary and advanced, under government endorsement. The re-organization of the army and the navy whose patriotic services have been beyond all praise, will be proceeded with. The government has profound respect for public opinion and approaches its task with a high resolve to perform its duties with unflinching honesty, its wish is to serve the best interests of the nation. The foregoing sets forth in a range of 1,000 yards, the purposes, the aims and the earnest endeavor of the republican party to put into operation the programme of the provisional government of Portugal. I send the above at the request of the minister of foreign affairs, Senor Bernardo Machado. (Signed) "BERNARDO MACHADO, Minister of Foreign Affairs."

Operto, Oct. 7.—The republican government has been definitely established here without a struggle. The populace with unflinching loyalty has proclaimed enthusiastically. The general commanding the local division of the troops obeyed the republican order and has been ordered to march in a body later to the barracks of the First Artillery, known to be ardent partisans of the republican party. In response to the clamors of the mob the artillerymen mutinied. They made their officers prisoners, trampled the royal flag under foot and marched out under the republican standard with four field guns and all available arms and ammunition. They entrenched themselves in a commanding position on the heights of the Park Traca De Marques. They were supported by constantly assembling revolutionaries in the Avenida Da Liberdade. The news of the rising was rapidly communicated to other disaffected centers in the city and then in accordance with the programme of the revolutionaries the 13th Infantry in barracks in the northeast part of the city, under the example of the artillery. The colonel of the regiment and two of his officers, upon being ordered to rally the men to allegiance to the king, were shot down in cold blood. The troops poured into the streets and the government, recovering from its stupefaction, tried to suppress the revolt. The authorities placed the city under martial law and the troops of proved loyalty were ordered out. They took positions overlooking the insurgent camp.

The police lacked a directing head. The chief of police, learning the extent of the rising, fled. He had a sudden attack of fever and was compelled to take to bed. Several Ministers were at different dinners. The commander and officers of the garrison were absent. The king was uncertainly in the hands of the revolutionaries. The American minister, who had been in the city, was asked him to send money to free an unfortunate heiress who was kept in durance anybody capable or willing to assume command. Not until 6 o'clock Tuesday morning did Colonel Lages, the general staff officer in Lisbon to take charge of the operations. He journeyed from Cascaes in an automobile lent to him by a British resident. In the meantime insurgent naval officers came ashore and took command of the rebel soldiers. They commanded the cab horses with which they broke through the royal lines and joined the rebels. There was considerable destroyery during the night, but no plan of an offensive nature on the part of the monarchists who relying on the loyalty of the troops, hoped to cow the rebels in the morning.

Measures were taken, however, to ensure the safety of the king. Troops and guns were held in the streets bordering the Palace. At 3 o'clock Tuesday morning a body of rebel troops with a mob of armed citizens tried to capture the palace. The royalists moved them back with machine guns. Many mutineers were captured; the remainder fled in disorder. At sunrise the sailors in the Marine Barracks at Alentez hoisted the republican flag. They sent detachments of sharpshooters to snipe the troops who guarded the palace. This was the first successful result. At the same time three warships lying in the bay hoisted the republican flag, the crews cheering and firing a salute. The capital was now like a city of the dead. No traffic was moving and there was no sign of a living soul. The two republican cruisers weighed anchor and steamed across the bay within range of the royal arsenals and men on the shore on board the Brazilian battleship Sao Paulo and the other foreign vessels. The crews of the other vessels cheered vociferously while the crews sailed to begin the work of destruction. Bring down the best interests of the nation. The foregoing sets forth in a range of 1,000 yards, the purposes, the aims and the earnest endeavor of the republican party to put into operation the programme of the provisional government of Portugal. I send the above at the request of the minister of foreign affairs, Senor Bernardo Machado. (Signed) "BERNARDO MACHADO, Minister of Foreign Affairs."

When the fire became too hot, the guests in the hotel lowered themselves from the windows in the rear of the ground and took refuge in the stables, where they remained for two days, subsisting on bread and fruit and sleeping in straw. They included several Englishmen and one American. Night brought but a brief respite. The rebels took advantage of the darkness to draw still tighter their investing cord, for in spite of the considerable losses Tuesday, the rebels declared that the repression of the revolt was a question of only a few hours. Four republican leaders now ministers, had headquarters in a chemist shop. They were equally sanguine. They said: "We will win if not today, then tomorrow."

C. P. R. OFFICIALS ON INSPECTION TOUR

Double Train Service Announced for Gibson Branch—Caribou More Plentiful

Superintendent D. B., Oct. 7.—(Special)—A party of C. P. R. officials composed of Frederick Norton, Divisional Freight Agent Bamford and an engineer, arrived here last night over the Gibson branch and went to St. John this morning. He announced while here that beginning on Monday a double train service would be inaugurated on the Gibson branch. Sportsmen visiting the central part of the province report caribou more plentiful than for ten years. This indicates that the animals are returning from the barrens in the northern section of the province to which they migrated some years ago. There is some talk here of the Intercolony authorities changing the time of departure, indicating that the Fredericton railway leaders in Lisbon are doing their utmost to secure the support of people in all sections of the kingdom. One of the first acts of the Central Commission which was constituted at the beginning of the month was to send out trustworthy emissaries by automobile to various distant points where it was hoped a sympathetic uprising could be produced. The republicans appear to be masters thus far of a section within a radius of about fifty miles from Lisbon. The railroads are at a standstill and in the neighborhood of Lisbon mountain roads are either barred or rendered impassable in some other way. The consensus of opinion in Lisbon appears to be that the final success of the revolutionary movement is still in doubt, depending upon the attitude of the province. Oporto's position in the matter will be of large influence. Gibraltar, Oct. 7.—The American cruiser Des Moines and the fleet with ships dressed flying the Portuguese flag at the mainmast, fired a royal salute at 8 o'clock this morning in honor of the members of the Portuguese Royal family who have found refuge here. A royal salute was also fired by the Des Moines.

While staying in Bristol such places of interest as Glastonbury, Wells cathedral and others in the neighborhood are being visited. It is expected that the visit will not extend beyond a week.

HOW ENGLAND VIEWS THE C. P. R. MEETING

Gen. Botha Will Be Elected by Acclamation—William O'Brien and the Irish Party

London, Oct. 7.—The market is well pleased with Sir Thomas Slingsby's statement at the Canadian Pacific Railway meeting, though a little disappointment has been expressed that more definite assurance was not given with regard to the distribution of the accumulation of surplus land assets. The Financial Times remarks that on the whole, the shareholders are little wiser than before regarding a solution of the principal C. P. R. problem.

PLENTY OF WATER NOW

Loch Lomond Supply Turned on This Morning About 5 O'clock

A pleasing and familiar sound greeted the ears of the inhabitants on awakening from their restless slumbers this morning. At first many were doubtful if they heard aright, but it was not long before they were satisfied that they would not have to fall in line with the "bucket brigade" today and in the future. The water, which had been lost for a couple of days from their taps, was not up to its general good color and taste, but was nothing to complain of. Engineer Murdoch said this morning that he had been out at the works since last evening until about 6 o'clock, when he reached the city earlier than about 10 when a good stream was distributed. The pressure throughout the morning was good, ranging at noon from about 180 to 200 pounds. The supply of water was also good throughout the city.

WOMEN FAVOR POLYGAMY

Or a Single Moral Standard—Polygamy Better Than Existing Conditions if Identical Standards for Men and Women Are Not Enforced

Washington, Oct. 5.—Socialists attending the International Prison Congress in Washington have got into a squabble over the responsibility for the existence of a double code of morals for men and women. Dr. Katherine B. Davis, Ph. D., of the University of Chicago, and head of the New York reformatory for Women, in an address said: "I advocate polygamy as a national institution, open and recognized, and the ideal standard of morals is improved for both men and women."

The cause of the crimes committed by the great majority of women is the fact that there is one set of morals for men and an entirely different standard for women. In the reformatory of which I have charge, and in which there are between 300 and 400 women, there are few who are not the victims primarily or solely of this double standard. If by men escape unscathed, with the complete tolerance, if not the approval of society, while women go to a position from which they can rarely be reclaimed, and our founding asylums are filled with defective children. "And so I say, emphatically, it is impossible for men to live by standards which civilization requires of its women, then let us establish an open asylum of polygamy. Let a man be married to as many wives as he can support. Let these women not be the outcasts of society, and let their children be given the love and care, and opportunity that every human being born into the world deserves. Would not this be infinitely better than the present system and its moral rotteness?"

In answering Dr. Davis Charles R. Henderson of the same university said: "I should say that the matter of a single code of morals rests absolutely with women. As Goethe has said: 'It is woman that so leadeth us upward.' How shall women take hold of the matter of establishing a single code of morals for both sexes? Why, first of all, let them be given a scientific education. "Let them know life frankly and without shame. And let them be morally and spiritually so sensitive to the highest ideal of civilization—one man for one woman—that they shall refuse to tolerate, much less condone, any other standard. "The fight for the single standard of morals has begun, and for kindred the English speaking people of the world."
