THE PREMIER (Toronto News)

M. Aristide Briand, the present Premier of France, was practically unknown, says The London Daily Mail, which has an interesting estimate of his career and character, until he was elected Deputy for Saint Etienne in 1902. Since then his rise to success and power, has been phenomenal. In less than seven years he has been successively Minister of Public Institutions, Minister of Fine Arts, Minister of Justice and Premier. M. Briand was born at Nantes in 1862. He studied at the college there and later went to Paris, where he became a barrister. Until very recently he has been an ardent socialist. For years he lived among workingmen, studied their needs and asserted their rights, and he introduced himself to the Chamber of Deputies when he succeeded M. Clemenceau as the first Socialist Minister of modern times. Since then, however, his views have slowly but surely tended towards an enterprising, direct and broad-minded conservatism.

The personal appearance of the man is anything but a true indication of his character. He is of average height, slim build, with weak knees and drooping shoulders. His face is sallow in complexion, with sunken eyes and a drooping black mustache. His whole appearance is insignificant and suggestive of weakness and dependency, whereas he is in reality unyielding and optimistic. As a statesman he

LONDON FILLING UP AGAIN

Mr. Balfour, who has of late been co-operating in a series of tariff reforms, has roused himself to rally his party by what they regard as a solemn and timely warning of the dangers of our national defence. The British people are not taking seriously the attempt to raise a navy scare. Mr. Balfour in his estimate of our naval weakness omitted to reckon the two colonial Dreadnoughts, and all the battleships up to eight ships over any other nation of the British Admiralty estimate for 1912.

Another Bridge Across Thames

The city corporation has decided to build a new bridge across the Thames which will be a valuable improvement. It is to cross the river between London Bridge and Blackfriars and it will open a fine vista leading to St. Paul's Cathedral which has always been comparatively hidden by a dingy congested district. The bridge is to cost about £2,500,000 and it is hoped before the work is begun that the London county council will join in the scheme and give to South London another tramway line across the river into the city.

Pass Padlock Bill

Madrid, Nov. 4.—The senate tonight, by vote of 149 to 38, passed the "Padlock bill," which prohibits the creation of further religious establishments in Spain until the revision of the concordat with the Vatican has been completed.

Revent and Relieve Headache

"It gives me great pleasure to be able to refer to Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills as the best remedy we have yet had in our house for the prevention and cure of headache. My wife who has been a constant sufferer for a number of years with above complaint joins me in the hope that they may fall into the hands of all sufferers."

JOHN BUSH, Watervliet, N.Y.

"Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are the best I ever tried for the relief of headache. I have used them for nearly four years and they never fail to give me relief. I have tried many other remedies, but have never found any better."

JOSEPH FRANKOWICK, St. Tremblay Ave., Detroit, Mich.

There is no remedy that more quickly relieves any form of headache than

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

The best feature of this remarkable remedy is the fact that it does not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects.

Life in London's Colony of Beggars—Babies on Hire—Denounced by Magistrate

The London Express says:—London has many little known districts, but none more strange than the Notting Dale colony of destitute beggars, denominated by Mr. Denning, the Marlborough magistrate as reported in yesterday's Express.

The Beggars' Colony is hidden in a maze of mean streets in the royal borough of Kensington, midway between the mansions of Holland Park and the bustling Edgware road—about a whole family of the police can do.

The deserving poor do not live in this area, or, if they do, have no association with the "tale-pitchers" as they call themselves. The colony has its own professional rules and manner of life, and poverty is certainly not one of the hardships from which its members are exempt.

The Notting Dale "tale-pitchers" are divided into the following groups:—

- (1) Men and women who make a specialty of supplying professional beggars with out-fits. Here can be purchased cheaply boards with "Def and dum" painted on, and rows of pictures of battles or disasters, in which the impostor who carries them certainly has no part.
- (2) "Records" can be bought cheaply at another house close by. These records are plausible "tales" invented to order, which the beggar learns by heart, and repeats in the ears of strangers he buttonholes in the streets.
- (3) A beggar-letter writer can buy here old lists of officers in old regiments, or the undergraduates at Oxford or Cambridge in any particular town, and can then at his ease compose pathetic epistles purporting to come from an "old friend in distress."
- (4) The earnings of professional beggars would astonish many who work hard at more honorable professions for a living. One of them, known as "The King of Beggars," who had a pitch close to the Stock Exchange building when arrested that he had received £200 a year from the district.
- (5) He rented a villa at Spdenham, where he returned each night with his changed professional clothes, and recovering from the "total paralysis" which afflicted him when "telling the tale" in the city.
- (6) A DAY.
- (7) Many take from 15s. to £1 a day with an ingenious tale, and a good workman's wages are taken by men who only "whine" a few hours a week.
- (8) The Notting Dale colony is the home of impostors, and an impressive list of names with many years' knowledge of the district to an "Express" representative yesterday.
- (9) "There are streets I could name in that district where no resident ever thinks of going," said an experienced police officer.
- (10) "They do not go short of money either. There are twelve public houses within a hundred yards of this colony, and the men and women always seem to have money to spend."
- (11) "Some of them do not think of getting up until six or seven in the evening. They know people are not in the humor to give money early in the day, so they pitch their tales late at night."
- (12) "Again and again charitable people come down to this district with clothes for children and food for starving families, drawn by some pious tale told them in the street."
- (13) "They find more often than not that there are no starving children and that the money they have already given has gone in drink or dissipation."
- (14) "Furnished rooms are let by the day in some streets in this Notting Dale district, and professional beggars find it an attractive address from which to send out their appeals. Hundreds of charitable people have been deceived in this way to my knowledge."
- (15) "The professional beggars choose this district, too, because it is so handy for the West End. A few minutes' walk brings them into the busy streets, where they lie in wait for the benevolent."
- (16) "Many of these defenders of the public have been convicted more than once, but they return to their old tricks."

BABY FOR SIXPENCE A DAY

A "tale-pitcher" who knows the ropes can hire a sickly infant at the reasonable rate of sixpence a day. An unusually wretched looking baby will be derided—perhaps misnamed—but a whole family of neglected mites can be borrowed for two shillings—and no questions asked.

One House in a Colony

One house in a colony makes a specialty of supplying professional beggars with out-fits. Here can be purchased cheaply boards with "Def and dum" painted on, and rows of pictures of battles or disasters, in which the impostor who carries them certainly has no part.

Records

"Records" can be bought cheaply at another house close by. These records are plausible "tales" invented to order, which the beggar learns by heart, and repeats in the ears of strangers he buttonholes in the streets.

Professional Beggar

The earnings of professional beggars would astonish many who work hard at more honorable professions for a living. One of them, known as "The King of Beggars," who had a pitch close to the Stock Exchange building when arrested that he had received £200 a year from the district.

Spdenham Villa

He rented a villa at Spdenham, where he returned each night with his changed professional clothes, and recovering from the "total paralysis" which afflicted him when "telling the tale" in the city.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—it is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It dispels the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not permit ourselves here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date edition, sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in slight binding for 50 stamps.
