HARRY ORCHARD UNDER SEVERE CROSS EXAMINATION YESTERDAY

BOISE, Idaho, June 10.—Into the further cross-examination of Harry Orchard today counsel for Wm. D. Hayward repeatedly threw the suggestion of a great counter-conspiracy formulated and carried out by the enemies of the Western Federation of Miners and indicated a determination to construct their main line of defense on that field.

They carried Orchard by slow steps through the minutest details from the dynamiting of the Independence depot, down to the attempt on the life of Fred Bradley and his family in San Francisco. In addition to a series of particular attacks on the credibility of the witness and the general probability of his story and preparing the way for their own testimony, in rebuttal, the defense sought to show that Orchard has a mania for boasting of the commission of crimes non-existent except in his own mind, and that he is testifying under the control and suggestion of the detective, McPartland.

The defense began today by making it clear that as far as Orchard knew, Hayward, Moyer and his associates, and Moyer had nothing to do with the planning of the murder of Detective Gregory.

Passing then to the dynamiting of the Independence station, the first crime with which the testimony of Orchard directly connects Hayward, Moyer and Pettibone, they endeavored to show that Orchard, in springing the mine, had purposely sought to spare the coming train and the non-union men who were expected to enchain and that the whole plot was engineered by agents of mine owners and railway managers, who wanted a comparatively harmless "outrage" to injure the union miners who were on strike.

Getting down to the Bradley crime, the defense devoted itself largely to the story of Orchard's alleged confession to Bradley, endangering the entire Bradley household, including an infant and the cook. Orchard swore that while in San Francisco he repeatedly received money from Pettibone, who used the name of "Pat Bone" in transmitting it. In making this clear today, the defense gave evidence of a plan to show that this money was sent under Pettibone's disguised name by persons plotting against the leaders of the Western Federation of Miners.

Orchard denied that he had any grudge against Bradley for his experiences in the Coeur d'Alenes. "You were just taking orders to kill from your chief," suggested Richardson.

"I was doing what Mr. Hayward told me," Orchard said. "I was following orders." Orchard asked Orchard if he did not have a grudge against Bradley because he was driven out of Northern Idaho.

"If I was driven out, it was my own fault," said the witness. Orchard said that he had no grudge against Bradley because he was driven out of Northern Idaho. Orchard said that he had no grudge against Bradley because he was driven out of Northern Idaho.

"No, sir," Orchard said. "I was following orders." Orchard said that he had no grudge against Bradley because he was driven out of Northern Idaho. Orchard said that he had no grudge against Bradley because he was driven out of Northern Idaho.

Within a few days he got $150 from Pettibone. He then met Hayward, who wanted him to go to Birmingham, Utah, to assassinate "Andy" Mayberry, who had laid off a lot of union men at his mines.

"Don't you know that as a matter of fact Hayward and Mayberry are good friends and always have been the warmest personal friends?" asked Attorney Richardson.

"I may be so; I didn't know it," Orchard said. He went to a man named Art Barton, about helping in the Mayberry assassination and then Pettibone in the latter's backyard. They sat there an hour or two and talked matters. Hayward and Orchard talked about the crime.

At this meeting Hayward said he would like Orchard to be a chauffeur and get Fred Bradley. The Mayberry matter was abandoned.

TOKIO, June 10.—Apparently Japan approaches The Hague a tentative programme to be given definite shape by the developments of the conference. Broadly speaking, it is believed that the Japanese delegates will act in close harmony with Great Britain. As regards the purely military subjects which will come before the conference, such as the regulation of hostilities by land and sea, the use of floating mines, control of wireless telegraph and kindred matters, Japan feels that recent events have given her a practical knowledge which the conference cannot fail to recognize, and the delegates are expected to assume a prominent place in any such discussions.

BRIEF DESPATCHES.

NORTH DANA, Mass., June 10.—The H. W. Goodwin Company's straw hat factory was burned tonight and the general store and postoffice, a mill and several residences were threatened by a fire which started in the boiler room of the hat factory.

The hat factory was destroyed with a loss of $5,000 partly covered by insurance. About seventy-five hands were employed in the factory.

HOPEDALE, Mass., June 10.—Gen. William F. Draper, formerly United States ambassador to Italy, today notified the directors of the Draper Company of his resignation as president of that company. The directors will hold a meeting next Monday to act on the resignation. General Draper made no statement regarding his action.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, June 10.—So far as can be learned tonight, the report which came from Oaxaca last night that President Cabrera, of Guatemala, had been assassinated, was without foundation.

PANAMA, June 10.—A premature explosion of dynamite took place this morning at Pedro Miguel, on the line of the canal and resulted in the instant death of seven men and the wounding of several others.

BOSTON, Mass., June 10.—George H. Nelson and Henry Ernest Radtke, the two boys who thought they might escape from the Martin Luther Home at West Roxbury on Sunday, June 2, by setting fire to the buildings, were arraigned in the West Roxbury district court today charged with arson.

Radtke pleaded not guilty, while Nelson pleaded guilty. Both boys were ordered to furnish securities in the sum of $500 for the grand jury. They were not being furnished, they were turned over to the State Board of Charities.

PEPPER AND ONIONS AND GARLIC AND—

At a restaurant downtown, redolent of pepper and garlic, where swarthy representatives of Spain and all the Spanish-American countries gather every day at the lunch hour, a lone American, accustomed to strictly unseasoned food, was gazing appreciatively at the bill of fare.

"What is chile con carne?" he asked the waiter.

"Ah, senior, nat is pepper and a leek the meat and pepper again and once more pepper and—"

"No matter. What is barbacoa 'a la vizcalina'?"

"It is delicious—codfish and red pepper and—"

"Forget it! What is olla 'a la Española'?"

"Ah! That is onions and pepper and garbanzo and chorizo and—"

"Bring me roast beef!"

EFFECT OF GOVERNMENT'S POLICY ON RAILROADS

From the Point of View of the Latter—An Interesting Interview.

NEW YORK, June 10.—No more railroads will be built in the undeveloped part of the United States except at the risk of and with the capital of existing lines, if the government's plan to fix rates based upon a railroad valuation is carried out, in the opinion of Stuart V. Eastman, former president of the Illinois Central R. R. Mr. Eastman expressed his opinion in a paper read at an address before the graduating classes in applied science at Columbia University today. He characterized the action of Congress in giving the Interstate Commerce commission the power of fixing rates as a distinct revision to the traditional practice, which will bring delay, if it does not in some places absolutely prevent the development of the west and south through the establishment of new jobbing centers.

"No man would venture his capital in the construction of a railroad in the raw country for anything like the five or six per cent. per annum which might be allowed by the government as a fair return thereon," said Mr. Eastman.

"In saying this let me not be understood as opposed to the regulation of the railroads by the state or by the authorities or by both, for in common with nearly all railroad men, I appreciate the justness, the necessity and the wisdom of such control. What I do object to is the attempt to fix in advance by statute the price of railroad rates or of any other service or commodity."

"So much has been said about the alleged overcapitalization of railroads and so many glaring instances of railroads in respect have been brought to light that the public have come to believe that the railroads as a whole are over-capitalized. I am free to admit that prior to 1880 the American railroads taken as a whole were over-capitalized in the sense that the sum total of their bonds and shares then outstanding exceeded the value, although it did not then exceed the cost of the property. Since that time, however, railroads as a whole, have gone through an era of tremendous undercapitalization, through the application of net income to betterments, and through reorganization, which were forced on many of them in the bad years following 1893, when for a long period fully one quarter of the railway mileage of the United States was in the hands of receivers. Apart from the great improvements in their tangible property thus shown, our railroads, which are now rendering two and a half times as much service as they did fifteen years ago, and better, cheaper and quicker service, at that are intrinsically worth vastly more in excess of the forty per cent. increase shown in their outstanding stocks
