THE DEAF AND DUMB.

The sixteenth annual report of the Fredericton Institution for the education of the deaf and dumb has been issued from the printer's press. The school for the present has its home in old Government House, views of the building and two days' rooms being given in the report. Principal Woodbridge states that the total attendance last year was forty-three pupils, of whom twenty-six were boys and seventeen girls. The pupils represented twelve New Brunswick counties, and one came from the United States. There were eleven from Westmorland county, seven from Kings, five each from York and Carleton, three each from Albert, Charlotte and Queens, and one each from five other counties. Reference is made to the difficulty experienced in finding out all the deaf and dumb children in the province, and the further trouble in some cases, in persuading parents to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the school. The arrangement with the local government for the occupation of Government House is limited to a sum of $25,000, and the question of raising funds for a new building becomes of immediate importance. The school began the year with a balance on hand of $28.70, and at the close the balance was $24.49. The total receipts were $5,574.33, made up as follows:

Rent of cottages	$54.50
Payments by parents	$301.95
Government grant	$500.00
County grant	$1,686.50
Contributions and subscriptions	$3,391.38
Total	$5,574.33

In the course of his report the Principal directs attention to what is being done for the education of the deaf and dumb in the United States, where there are altogether one hundred and twenty thousand pupils. Over two and a quarter millions of dollars (as far as statistics are given) was spent on these schools in 1895. In Canada there are seven schools, with eight hundred and fifty-five pupils last year. A comparison of expenditure per pupil shows that in Ontario, Montreal and Manitoba the amount is larger than in this province.

The various sections of the report under review show that pains are taken not only to educate the children in the more essential branches, but the older girls are given lessons in sewing, fancy work and painting on silk and china, while one afternoon each week is devoted to drawing. The domestic arrangements of the school are such as to make the pupils feel thoroughly at home, and in all respects the work of this excellent institution is such as to commend it to the hearty support of the people of New Brunswick.

SAMOA.

The Samoan Islands, whose affairs are now receiving the attention of the British, United States and German governments, are discussed in the current number of the Monthly Summary of Commerce and Finance, just issued by the treasury bureau of statistics at Washington. The islands are located about 2,000 miles southwest of the Hawaiian Islands, and their special importance lies more in their position as coaling and repair stations rather than in their direct commercial value. The group consists of 10 inhabited and two uninhabited islands, with an area of 1,700 square miles, and an aggregate population of 36,000 people, of which something over 200 are British subjects, 135 Germans, 25 Americans, 25 French and 25 of other nationalities, while the remainder are natives. The bulk of the population is located in the three islands of Upolu, Savaii and Tutuila, the number in Upolu being 16,000, in Savaii 12,500, and in Tutuila 3,000. The islands are of volcanic origin, but fertile, producing coconuts, cotton, sugar and coffee; the most important, however, being coconuts, from which the copra of commerce is obtained by drying the kernel of the coconut, the copra, which is exported to Europe and the United States, being used in the manufacture of coconut oil. The exportation of copra in 1895 amounted to 12,565,908 pounds, valued at $231,372. A considerable proportion of this was exported to the United States; a larger proportion, however, to Germany.

Special interest attaches to the islands from the standpoint of the United States, says the Summary, by reason of the fact that the harbor of Pago Pago, in the island of Tutuila, the southernmost of the group, was ceded to the United States as a naval and coaling station.

WOULD LIKE TO TRADE.

The New York Herald recently discusses the proposal for an exchange between Britain and the United States of the British West Indies and the Philippines. The Herald regards it as well worthy of consideration, and says that such a nation would thereby be giving up something it could well spare for something more valuable. In the case of the British West Indies, our contemporary believes the stimulating influence of American government in Porto Rico and Cuba will cause the people of the British islands to feel themselves at a disadvantage and unable to compete on even terms.

The Herald's article is based on a memorial from the people of St. Kitts and Nevis, two very small islands, to the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, asking that the sugar bounties be abolished, or steps taken to effect the proposed exchange. This memorial is said to have been signed "by members of the legislature by the leading owners of sugar estates, and by a large number of merchants, managers of estates, artisans, laborers, and in fact, by the representatives of all classes and interests in the islands." The memorial is addressed to Mr. Chamberlain, a member of the legislative council of the Leeward Islands, is evidently a pronounced annexationist, but if the question of a change of allegiance actually came up there would be other voices heard. It will be noted that the exchange between the two countries is only proposed as an alternative, the real object of the memorialists being to secure counter-vailing duties to place their sugar on an equal footing with the bounty-fed sugars of Europe on the English market. There is nothing in this to indicate a desire on the part of the people of the British West Indies to be made the commodity of a bargain between the two nations. The United States, having assumed "the white man's burden" in the Philippines, will be permitted to go on with the show. To treat the matter, as the Herald does as simply an exchange to be effected by Lord Salisbury and President McKinley, suggests that government by consent of the governed is becoming an old-fashioned idea with the expansionists of the republic.

THE CLAIMS OF HALIFAX.

The Industrial Advocate states that the Halifax board of trade have under preparation a pamphlet setting forth the claims and advantages of that port as the chief Canadian Atlantic port. The Advocate observes that Halifax is fitted to be the chief export point for all kinds of Canadian goods. It adds the astonishing remark that the very best authorities are now beginning to affirm this statement. There can be no objection to the efforts of the people of Halifax to enlarge their trade and endeavor to divert from American ports as much as possible of the Canadian business now carried on through those ports. Everything that can be done by the citizens to facilitate and cheapen the handling of freight at that point will be worthy of the highest commendation. In these respects there may be rivalry without jealousy between Halifax and St. John. The position of St. John and its railway connections, however, give it an advantage in the handling of western traffic which the "very best authorities" will never be likely to overlook. So far as western freight business is concerned, St. John will continue to be the chief winter port.

BETTER PRICES FOR LUMBER.

The higher price paid for lumber both in the English and American markets, as compared with last year's business, is a source of gratification and will have a beneficial effect on business generally. The Sun is informed that prices for deals for the English market are about $1.50 per thousand higher than a year ago, while freights are nearly ten shillings lower. The advance in the American market is said to be $2 to $3 over the figures of last year, but in this trade, owing to the great destruction of vessels in the fall and winter storms, freights are somewhat higher. This, of course, is good for the shippers now in the trade. But the difference in freights is not proportionate to the advance in lumber, so that the lumber shippers can pay the higher charge and still have a good margin. Improvement in the American market has been hoped for each succeeding spring for some years but without being realized. Now the building trade appears to have responded to the generally improved conditions in business over the border, and a healthier condition of the lumber trade is the result. The change is welcomed all the more because last year saw more of loss than profit in the business, both on British and United States account. At one time last season the large shippers hesitated to send their lumber forward on consignment. British buyers are not eager to purchase at present prices, but a good business is nevertheless in progress. The cut this season, though not as small as was anticipated last fall, will be smaller than that of last year. It is to be hoped the present favorable condition of the trade will continue throughout the season. It is not a boom, but a healthy reaction from a depression that bore hard upon a most important industry.

AFRAID TO FACE IT.

The result of the Easter conference between Mr. Blair and Mr. Emmerson was a point of order, by which it is hoped to prevent any present enquiry into the bridge scandals. The course of the government in this whole matter is discreditable, and in striking contrast to the declarations of the premier during the election campaign. The man who then courageously enquired is now feebly more interested in preventing an investigation. It must have been a great shock to the candidate of Mr. George Robertson to see his ideal statesman seeking to shelter himself behind a ruling of the speaker. Mr. Blair, instructed in Wellington's debate that Mr. Hazen was not honestly seeking an investigation, but trying to throw dust in the eyes of the people. The attorney general declared that the government was ready for an investigation. This is all humbug. An honest investigation is the very thing the government does not desire. In view of Mr. Emmerson's vehement assertions of the government's innocence, and in view of the gravity and special nature of the charges made by the opposition, it would be the duty of innocence to facilitate in every way the fullest enquiry. Nobody knows better than Mr. Emmerson and Mr. Blair and Mr. Tweedie that the very best thing that could happen from their standpoint, would be to have a full investigation, if thereby it could be shown that they have not been paying two or three prices for bridges. Mr. Hazen has sought honestly to secure an enquiry, and has been met at every point by government obstruction. If they cannot entirely prevent an investigation they will do all in their power to make it a farce. In this they will find Mr. Blair's counsel of great value. If there is nothing to conceal, why all this dodging behind a speaker's rulings and points of order? The disciples of Mr. Blair are worthy of their master.

These grit journals which are paying flattering tributes to the Hon. John Costigan seem to have forgotten that for many years he was a member of a Tory government, and held up to the scorn and contempt of all good liberals. But perhaps it would be better in dealing with Liberal denunciations of opponents to adopt a statement from the Motion Transcript, using the word "grit" instead of "Tory." The Transcript's statement would then read: "The more bitter the grit attacks upon any politician, the more certain it is that the politician attacked is pursuing an upright, honorable and defensible course."

The enforcement of the charge of five dollars for a bill of health on vessels from provincial ports to ports in the United States is not creditable to the latter country. There is no more reason for such an exaction in the case of vessels sailing from St. John than from Esquimaux or Bangor. The amount derived from this source is not large enough to make it worthy of consideration as a source of revenue, and the health of the republic would not be endangered by its abolition. But it does affect the business of small shippers, especially when freights are low, and it is a source of irritation that should not exist in these days of professed friendship between the two nations.

The offer of the United States to pay $300,000 to the native Cuban troops was at first rejected with scorn by the military assembly of the island. The Cubans wanted an amount many millions larger. The offer was made at the close of the war. Wearied at last by the delay the American government declared that if the offer was not accepted, and the muster roll of the army produced, the money would be returned to the United States. The ultimatum, however, had the desired effect. The assembly has voted to liberate the army and dissolve, and the executive committee will furnish the American governor general with copies of the muster rolls.
