Outlines Measures To Increase N. B.'s Hardwood Industry

Special Investigator Makes Report on Possibilities of Increased Market in Great Britain — George W. Bartlett Stresses Essentials in Report to Minister of Lands and Mines.

KILN DRYING BIRCH & MAPLE

Fredericton, N. B., Sept. 27. — Improvement and stimulation of our sawing to suit English requirements, kiln drying our birch and maple and a closer co-operation in our sales effort, are the three essentials necessary to develop and increase New Brunswick's hardwood trade in Great Britain, according to George W. Bartlett, of Fredericton, who some months ago carried on an extensive investigation of the British market for certain hardwood products.

Definite and concrete suggestions how New Brunswick hardwood products may increase trade with the Old Country are contained in a report submitted by Mr. Bartlett, a summary of which is issued today by Hon. L. P. D. Tilley, Minister of Lands and Mines.

"We must dry kiln our higher grade birch and maple" is one of the outstanding suggestions which Mr. Bartlett makes in his exhaustive report. He declares further that New Brunswick can never command the favor of the English motor car and cabinet manufacturer until the birch and maple is kiln dried.

Establishment of customs dry kilns along the line of transport to tide water, would appear to be logical solution of the problem of providing more dry kilns in New Brunswick, so Mr. Bartlett reports, as he believes the construction of dry kilns at our hardwood mills would entail a greater capital outlay, than our millmen could afford.

Discussing this phase of the hardwood industry Mr. Bartlett says: "In the application of the rapid drying method recently developed in Europe, the essential feature is the prolonged steam treatment immediately after sawing.

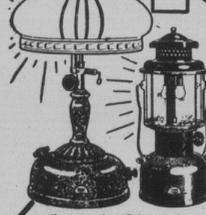

"This could most advantageously be done at the mills, the only expenditure necessary being the construction of the sheds adjoining the mills where the green lumber could be treated with exhaust steam.

"If this method can be applied to our birch and maple, it should be marketable within two months after sawing, instead of being air dried from six months to a year, before kiln drying, as is now the practice.

"The necessity of kiln drying our birch and maple cannot be too strongly stressed. U. S. users of our hardwood always so treat it.

"The extreme popularity of our Canadian Maple Flooring in England further emphasizes the necessity of kiln drying our lumber."

He advocates a more strenuous sales campaign on behalf of New Brunswick hardwood products in Great Britain and comments as follows: "Now is the time for us to work to obtain or share of the vast potential British market for our birch and maple. Time and money will have to be spent in the study and development of this market. I feel certain that the results will amply repay judicious efforts put forth in this study."

YOUTH, HUNTING, DISCOVERED DEAD

Body of E. J. Thibodeau, 16-Year-Old Green River Boy, Found.

EDMUNDSTON, Sept. 25. — Missing from his home since Thursday 16-year-old E. J. Thibodeau, of Green River, was found dead Friday night a few miles from his home, as the result of a discharge of a gun through his liver.

How the accident occurred is not known, but it was thought that Thibodeau was lying on a little knoll and in some way got in front of his gun, which discharged. The youth had evidently tried to walk, as it was seen where he dragged himself for about four feet before he fell for the last time.

He had set out to hunt birds and carried a .410 gauge shotgun. Royal Canadian Mounted Police investigated the accident.

Real Indian Feast

If Canada's national festival is the "Maple Sugar Camp" the big event of the late season is the "Corn Roast."

And corn roasts should be the vogue now that Canada's own sweet corn is in the fields in its available and just begging to be eaten. The chief ingredients of a successful corn roast are a group of congenial people, a suitable location preferably a beach, a roaring bonfire, plenty of corn, butter, salt and a good appetite.

There are two ways of cooking the corn. The simplest and the method preferred by most people, is to peel off the husks, transfix the ear with iron sticks and hang them in the flame of the fire, until cooked. Another way is to take along a boiling kettle with a wire handle, and boiled the ears together. Strictly speaking this is not a "corn roast", but it has the advantage that all the ears are ready for eating at the same time, so that those in charge of operations may sit down and enjoy the feast with the other members of the party. —Ministry of Agriculture, Ottawa.

UMBRELLAS NO MORE NEEDED

Where are the umbrellas and the "slicker" of yesterday? As far as the motor car owner of to-day is concerned the umbrella is gathering dust in a neglected corner of some little-used clothes closet, and the slicker is hanging on an equally neglected peg above it. For the abolition of weather as a social factor is not the least of the revolutions which the closed automobile has brought about.

In the good old days the theatre, the church, the concert, the party, the political meeting, the old time social, every indoor event which depended upon the gathering of people beyond hope by even a passing summer shower at the critical moment.

But to-day the hostess no longer casts an anxious and fretful eye upon the sky. She knows that the event she has planned and labored for will suffer little from inclement weather. In spite of rain, snow, sleet or blustering wind, the guests will arrive, carried safely and unwetted by the private motor car or a low-cost, swift and efficient taxi-cab service.

This achievement of the motor car in removing the weather ban to amusement and social enjoyment of almost every kind is to-day taken very much for granted. It is the natural heritage of the younger generation. For them school, night class, the music lesson, the gymnasium or dancing class, the church society and every amusement provided under a roof may be enjoyed regularly and with certainty as far as weather is concerned. The older generation remember the days when social life in wet weather demanded a snug slicker, a good umbrella, a pair of goshes and a stout hat.

"STRAINING THE SPYGLASS"

Self-respect is a prerequisite state of mind that elevates one's mental and physical prepotence to the heights of social and material success.

Without self-respect there can be no happiness or peace of mind. With out self-respect, the possessor of gold and diamonds fails to see their lustre and worth. Without self-respect, the owners of mansions find them dim and empty. Without self-respect, silks and satins appear drab and uninteresting.

Self-respect is a spiritual condition that nourishes the mental, which in turn feeds the physical, to greater and prolonged mental and physical contentment. For, without respect for himself, no one can garner the fruits of happiness or success. No quantity of artificial pretention can counterbalance one iota of self-respect.

This individual element contains all the vitamins that are necessary to nourish peace and character. It is the fuel that keeps the fire of continued attainment burning unceasingly. It is the stimulant that stimulates lagging courage and banishes melancholy. It is the flaming spark that lights the road ahead.

It need not be written in large letters on one's features; one's dress plays no part in its existence; no outward influence can dim or brighten its light — for self-respect is a light that shines from within, and no amount of outward tinsel can increase its glow.

Neither has social position or material quantity any influence on its quality or value. One may be a millionaire or a pauper; but should the millionaire lack self-respect, he is poorer than the pauper. Self-respect is worth infinitely more than the others here and social attainments.

Its power is unathomable; it's effective far-reaching; it brooks no territorial division, it recognizes no boundary. There is no limit to its height or depth.

Its unseen influence molds one's character and incentive; and character and incentive are the all-necessary requisites to mental and physical contentment and success.

Without self-respect, the man is not the mental balance and physical magnetism that gives peace of spirit and the physical confidence to overcome the social and competitive obstacles that greet the path.

For, without self-respect, no matter how intelligent or capable — can bring within their influence that which ultimately brings success.

And success may not be tallied by the number of figures on the right side of a bankbook. Success is not measured only by dollars and social prominence. Gilded mansions, the latest styles, the poses are not marks of success, social, material or mental.

Those endowed with sufficient self-respect, have no need of luxuries or mansions, a kowtowing benefactor, social prominence or effusive but unreliable friendships.

Self-respect is a stimulating food that stirs one's soul and contentment; it is in flats or apartments; to pay the monthly bills without any left over, and a self-contained assurance that gives the worst-fear-worst a maroon finish. In that country only the Imperial Household may use maroon.

BUSINESS SURE IS TERRIBLE: It is well to remember that the retail salesman with the order pad is the real hero of the automobile business. He meets buying inertia and other little difficulties like that and overcomes them. Take the case of Chevrolet salesman J. E. Bernard of Port Angeles, Washington. He might NOW IT'S COTTON ROADS

A workman had his shirt torn off by a naphthal distributor and it dropped to the bed of a new highway being built in Arkansas. Now engineers and cotton experts are seeing what can be done about getting a few cotton shirts in the base of every highway, and soon we may have "cotton roads." Believe it or not, the spot where the workman's shirt dropped was the only place that resisted cracking from mud and rain action, and it turned out that the cotton fabric, waterproofed with asphalt, was what did the trick. Since then experiments have been conducted with large rolls of loosely woven cotton cloth laid on an asphalt base with more asphalt placed on top. The use of the cotton creates tensile strength just as fabric does in an automobile tire. Cotton growers are not at all sorry the workman lost his shirt.

NEW TRUCKS DELIVER SERUM. Grateful for the prompt assistance of two trucks was Dr. Freeborn of Magnetawan when it became necessary to obtain convalescent serum in a hurry for one of his small infantile paralysis patients. It was late at night when the doctor called the Provincial Laboratories in Toronto for a supply. There were no trains for many hours. The director of the laboratory took the serum to a circulation driver about to start his truck for Gravenhurst. It was only three hours later when the precious package was transferred at Gravenhurst to the hands of another truck driver, who took it as far as Burk's Falls. A rural mail carrier completed the trip to Magnetawan. "It was good work," Dr. Freeborn said "and I want to say thanks."
