The Cabinet Change.
 Poor Ross has finally taken the sop offered to him, and will not be on hand to vote against the Government next session. Yall, "Skipper" Yall, the man who used his faithful following in the Nova Scotia Assembly last winter for the purpose of getting an able Opposition member turned out of the House in the Cabinet, succeeds Ross in the Cabinet. The Skipper was selected because no one of Ross's twenty colleagues would take a seat in the falling Cabinet. Yall wanted the honor, he had long used the Government funds and patronage in the interests of the "Reform" clique, and on the refusal of Killian and others to endure a few months of Mackenzie's snubbing, he was assigned by Mr. Annand to the duty of filling the gap. He will be returned by Mr. Annand, of course, for Ross's or Oakes's constituency. This whole business is most discreditable. In the Cabinet as the price of his desertion of Macdonald, as no man of his intellectual status would have been freely chosen for the position. Then he was ignored and insulted by the Premier who had bought him, Mr.
 Mackenzie openly declaring in Parliament that he had formed Ross's department. Then, at last, he was ordered out, and the Halifax Collection offered as a sop to soothe his indignation. He refused the bribe, was turned out of office, and then went humbly to the master who had dealt so harshly with him and accepted the sop that he had scorned. Alas for W. Ross!
 Like those who sell themselves to the evil one his enjoyment of power was of short duration and his humiliation is great. Others whom Mackenzie purchased with Cabinet portfolios are trembling in their shoes.

Credes and Conversions.

Credes and conversions have been constructed to suit various phases of the human mind and various crises of the world's history. Each new one filled a void. Each successful one was invented because there was a demand for it, and furnished because it responded to insatiable longings or soothed innate fears in many human hearts. Ages and countries have differed in regard to the systems of worship best adapted to their respective spiritual comfort and development, and individuals differ in the same respect to-day.
 Amusements and all in all innocent takes a childish delight in his own amusements and in all the good things of the world, feels the perfect joy of a pure heart, an unassumed trust and benevolent self sacrifice, trusts his salvation implicitly to the great Father in heaven, and scorns the "hangman's whip" of the doctrine of eternal punishment. He has no need of its discipline, and cannot realize that others might become evil-doers if it were not for its restraining influence. Another man, who is so constituted to work only in a promised reward, or to avoid a threatened punishment, would be without stimulus to good deeds and without horror of evil if he did not see the flowery gardens of the saved and the fery lake of the damned in readiness for the reception of souls. One man, who is strong in his reliance on his own intellect, interprets God's teachings for himself, and another man can find confidence only in the interpretation of some one else. One man worships intellectually, imaginatively, and another needs symbols to arouse his devotional feelings and with which to express his spiritual yearnings—just as children can learn only from objects, and one man is great and good only by being free, and another is worse than useless unless he has a master. Men are born into creeds, trained in the faith of their fathers, and the parental creed does not always satisfy their spiritual needs, as the parental trade does not always suit their tastes or talents. The result is that somebody is always renouncing the inherited faith that does not fit him for a fitting faith that he finds ready for his acceptance. He has been an indifferent Protestant, and he becomes a zealous and devout Catholic; or he has been a spiritually-earnest Protestant. The change of faith was the very best thing that happened to either, and their friends should rejoice instead of lament at the change.

The most notable conversion of the year—a notable chiefly because the convert has a title and extensive estates—is that of the Marquis of Ripon, the High-Joint mediocrity who is chiefly responsible for the Treaty of Washington. Mail advices confirm the telegraphic statement that the conversion caused much excited comment, but shed little light on the steps that led the muddled Marquis from Masonry to Rome. Most of the statements of correspondents have evidently been manufactured by the writers, and English journals do not think it necessary to investigate such personal matters. He is not a great man intellectually. Like most of those who devote much of their time to the forms and ceremonies of secret societies, and delight to hold high offices in them, he is pleased with show, satisfied with sound, and restless without the ruts of routine to run in. Men of real intellect refresh themselves with all that is inspiring and ennobling in societies which they join, and stand aside, with more or less aversion, from the mummeries which are so dear to the mass of their brethren. The shall-ownness of the intellect that, as a rule, sit in the seats of honor in the Supreme Lodges, Conclaves, etc., etc., is proverbial, and neither the Marquis of Ripon nor his successors are an exception to the rule. The Marquis finds in the exercise of the faith he has chosen, complete gratification of the love of symbols and ceremonies that he manifested by his devotion to the ceremonies of the society he has renounced, and is, at last, in the spiritual groove in which he has been running, and his full and his devotional feelings are fed, and his selfish and ceremonial system of worship, and he has found it; he sought to learn on some strong and confident interpreter of God's teachings, and he has an infallible Pope as his guide; he had grovelling longings for humbling himself before some priest to hear his confessions, and he is now to hear the now he has the "priest" to hear

 the confession of wrong-doing and prescribe the penance that is necessary for blotting it out of the record. His mind is not masculine enough, his individuality not pronounced enough, his spiritual nature not pure enough, for him to be satisfied with the self-dependence, free interpretation and naked faith of Protestantism, and it is better for him to be where he is. Those who fear that his example will be followed by a great many others may be sure that his will follow it who confides in his own prayer-guided intellect to interpret the revelations of God to man for himself, has the pride of person and sense of equality that shrinks from crouching at the feet of any of his fellows, and possesses the clear spiritual sight that sees souls mounting to the Throne of the eternal God without the aid of a man-made hierarchical ladder.

Old Fellows.

The R. W. Grand Lodge of the United States—the supreme head of the Order in the world—has lately been in session at Atlanta, Georgia. From Atlanta papers, and the reports of the Grand Secretary and Grand Sire, the Order is shown to be in a very flourishing condition. The revenue of the Grand Sire is a voluminous document, occupying 128 pages of closely printed matter. It deals with the work in every jurisdiction. There were present at the late session representatives from 40 of the United States, and 4 from Ontario. The order in America is divided into 30 Grand Lodges, with 6600 Subordinate Lodges, 119 Subordinate Encampments, and 87,454 were initiated during the past year and the total membership is 414,815, of whom 80,181 belong to the Encampment. During the year $1-190,274.72 were paid for the relief of the revenue of the R. W. Grand Lodge was $22,025 and the aggregate revenue of the order was $4,434,001.
 The report of the Grand Sire is dated at Santiago de Chile, where he is at present on an ambassadorial mission to the Grand Lodge, and the appointment after his election as Grand Sire. He has already introduced the order in Chili and organized several lodges.
 The people of Atlanta seem to have done everything to honor the representatives to the Grand Lodge, entertaining them in the most hospitable way. Representative M. J. Durham, of Kentucky, was elected Grand Sire, and Rep. Stokes, of Pennsylvania, Deputy Grand Sire.
 Grand Sire Graham is a member of the U. S. Congress and an old and tried Old Fellow, while his Deputy has been a representative to the Grand Lodge for 30 years.

Disastrous Fire at Washademoak.

About 7 o'clock on Sunday evening last was discovered in the store of Chas.
 O. White, at Washademoak Narrows, and before the alarm could be given to the people in general, who were in church a short distance away, the store was one mass of flames, which had communicated to the dwelling of Mr. Samuel White.
 At this time the flames were devouring the two premises with such rapidity as to render the attempts of the people who endeavored to save anything from the house useless. The outhouses, together with a smoke house, next took fire.
 The neighbors, who worked like Trojans, finding it impossible to save these buildings, devoted their energies to saving the barn, which they succeeded in doing after a severe struggle. Everything in the store was burned to ashes, and only a little furniture was saved from the house, which was burned to the ground. Mr.
 Samuel White and family were away from home, as was Mr. Charles White, who was in this city yesterday stating the facts as above. The Messrs.
 White are insured in the Royal Canadian for $1,650, the policy having been effected a few days ago. A large sum of money that Mr. White had left in his store, thinking it would be as safe there as in his person, was either burned or else, as is generally thought, stolen by the person who set fire to the building. There has been no fire in the store this season, in fact, not any stove, and it was there the fire originated.
