A farmer in the Duart district, who has corn from ten to fifteen feet high, says he will cut the stalks about three feet from the ground and then go over the field a second time and cut the butts off and pile them up for wood. WHAT ABOUT THIS?
The suggestion is made that in order to conserve fuel for the coming winter the business places of the village should close at six o'clock every evening in the week with the exception of Wednesdays and Saturdays.

This suggestion is in line with what the business men in practically the whole Dominion are doing. During the late fall and winter months the business done in the evenings, with the exception of Saturday, will not pay for the cost of lighting the store set alone the fuel burned, and those living in the rural district generally do their shopping in the daytime rather than be out in the cold and very often rainy nights.

Aside from it being an economic duty to yourselves it is an economic duty to your country to save fuel.

LETTER FROM DAN MCARTHUR

Mrs. Peter McArthur has the following interesting letter from her son Dan, written at the battle line in France on August 14 and mailed August 18:

Dear Mother,—Conditions are becoming more settled after a very strenuous couple of weeks, and I can send you a few lines more than field post cards. As you will know from the papers long before this reaches you, the Canadians have been in the thick of the Anglo-French advance of August 8th, and our division of artillery has seen its share of the fighting.

It would be quite useless for me to try to give you any detailed account of the show—we have our correspondents here for that, anyway—but it was a beautiful surprise for Fritz and as straight and unqualified a defeat on the field as it possibly could be. The Canadian advance of twelve miles on August 8th is, I believe, a record. We have put into practice methods of operations that we were taught at Petawawa and used to laugh at last winter. Cavalry, tanks, "whippets," armored cars and great squadrons of planes made the advance picturesque and we were taught at Petawawa and used to laugh at last winter. Cavalry, tanks, "whippets," armored cars and great squadrons of planes made the advance picturesque and we were taught at Petawawa and used to laugh at last winter.

As I said, we have had a strenuous time, but our casualties have been light, and though we have all been very tired at times the boys are remarkably well and in the highest spirits. We have never lacked food or water and the Y. M. has followed close behind with chocolate, biscuits and cigarettes. I never felt better than I do now.

This is a fine success for the corps (and the Australians and French as well, and the British cavalry and tanks) and will help hasten the final victory. But war is always a miserable and disgusting business for men to be in at best. Love to all.—DAN.

FORMER RECTOR'S SON KILLED

Graduating from the Dutton high school he entered Toronto University and obtained his B. A. degree, and was taking his theological course in Wyke, where he was a member of the medical corps.

He served as hospital orderly with this unit in England until last New Year's, when he received his transfer into the air force. He was ward master of some months at the hospital and had attained the rank of sergeant.

Besides his mother he leaves one sister, Gladys, and a brother, William K.
