

The "Maple Leaf" quartette at rehearsal on Salisbury Plains, singing "O Canada."

A Highland Regiment crossing a pontoon bridge near the battle ground of the Aisne.

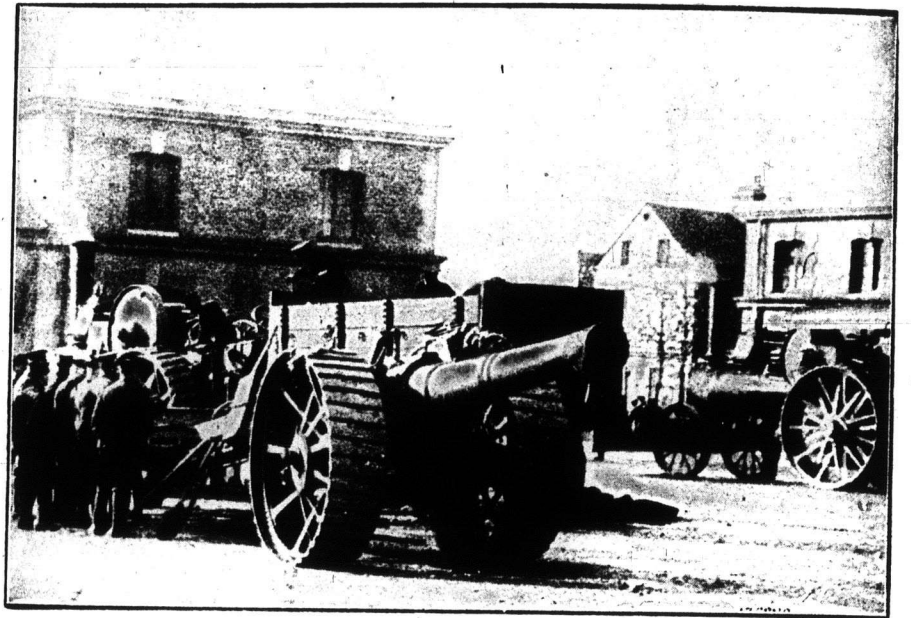

A picturesque group choosing a site for an Indian camp in France—Allies of three nations.

German liners lying idle at the wharves along the Hudson River in New York city.

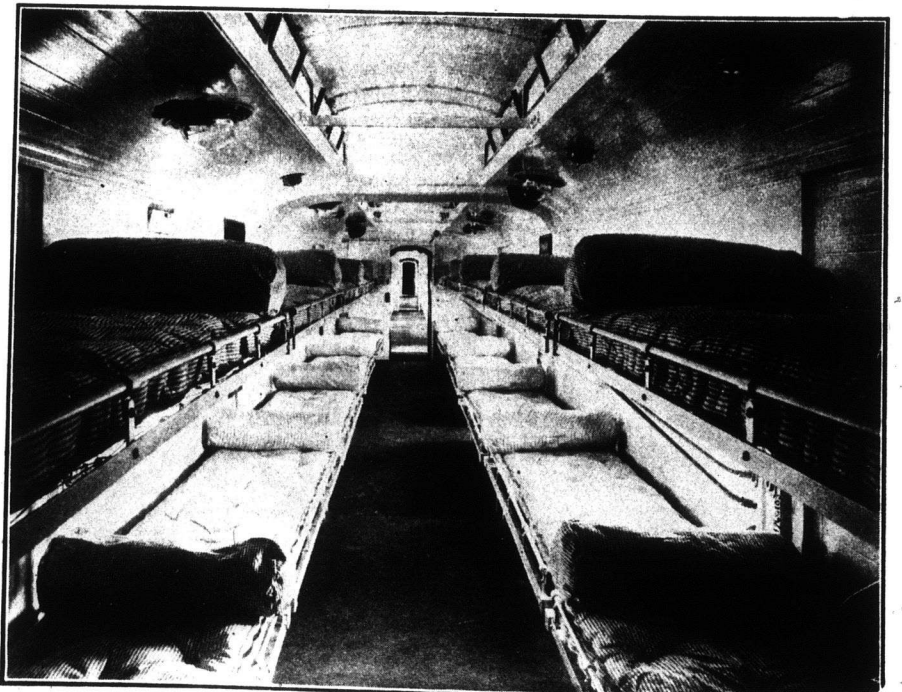

Confiscating Belgian cattle to feed the German garrison.

England's big siege guns now at the front. One of the monster new heavy English guns being landed in France preparatory to moving it to the front. These guns mounted on heavy carriages and drawn by traction engines are capable of executing an appalling amount of damage.

Belgian soldiers firing at a passing aeroplane.

Interior of an English Military Ambulance Train. A splendid idea is conveyed by this photo of what a military ambulance train looks like. In its spotless interior, the wounded are conveyed from the battle lines to the base hospitals. Every aid known to modern science and surgery is called on while the men are being borne in this train to the hospitals. This particular train is on the Midland railroad, but every railroad company in England is furnishing to the government many such trains similarly equipped.