

up the stores delivered in a part year before commencing to use those recently delivered. There should not be any flour two years old in the institutions; that should have been used before the flour delivered in 85-6 was touched, and this principle should be observed in the case of all perishable supplies or supplies liable to deteriorate in quality, or bulk, or weight, by being kept over from one year to another. This of course does not apply to soap which retains its excellence of usefulness even after losing much of its bulk from evaporation.
 With respect to the Inspector's remark, that invoices should
