

Fragments of Sam Slick

thing is swapped for another, and you must abide by the laws of trade.

Civility is cheap coin, and kindness is a nice bank to fund it in.

There is roguery in all trades but our own.

It takes a great many strange people to make a world.

There is wisdom sometimes in a fool's answer ; the learned are simple, the ignorant wise ; hear them both.

Coerced innocence is like an imprisoned lark ; open the door and it's off for ever.
