

Piles

That Dr. Chase's Ointment actually cures even the worst cases of itching, bleeding and protruding piles we know for a certainty, because of experience with thousands of cases. To prove this to you we shall send you a sample box free, if you enclose a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper.

Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Love in a Flour Mill

OR,

The Romance of Two Loyal Hearts!

CHAPTER XXX.

Ronald posted back by the first train to Eaton Square. How was he to tell Cara; how would she take the news he was bringing her?—news of a kind which still held him startled and almost incredulous, which the people at the Hall were scarcely yet recovered from.

Cara, as she came into the drawing room to him, saw that something was the matter, that something serious had happened.

"You have come back very soon," she said quietly, as he took her in his arms.

"Yes," he said. "I've something to tell you, dearest. Lemuel Raven is—dead!"

She turned pale and winced. She noticed, even at that moment, that he had said "Lemuel Raven," not "your father."

"My father—dead?" she said, with a shudder.

"No; he was not your father, Cara," he said gravely.

"Not—!"

She started, and the colour came slowly, deeply, to her face; she drew a long breath, and her lips moved in thanksgiving, as he knew, though no words came. "I am not his daughter! Then who am I?"

Now, Ronald had been thinking hard all the way up; and, as we know, thinking, hard or easy, was not his forte; but he had arrived at a decision which was a sensible one.

"I'm going to ask you not to ask me; to wait until you get to Thorden, dearest," he said persuasively. "I want Evelyn to tell you. She'll do it better than I can. Is it too much to ask you to wait, Cara?"

"No," she replied, in her usual, simple, direct fashion. "I can wait."

"Right!" he said. "We go down to-morrow. The Princess must come along, too. I've asked you to wait; but I want to say this, darling—that there is nothing to cause you disappointment, grief, Oh, dear! I shall out with it if I go on!"

She laid her hand on his lips, and

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy is Home-Made

Easily Prepared in a Few Minutes. Cheap but Unequaled

Some people are constantly annoyed from one year's end to the other with a persistent bronchial cough, which is wholly unnecessary. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make you wonder what became of it. Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending the cough. It also loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflammation in a painful cough with remarkable rapidity. Ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, winter coughs and bronchial asthma.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup mixture makes 16 ounces—enough to last a family a long time—at a cost of only 54 cents. It is prepared. Full directions with Pinex. Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in zinc, and is famous the world over for its ease, certainty and promptness in overcoming bad coughs, chest and throat ailments.

Get the complete and correct directions for 2½ ounces Pinex, and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

smiled into his eyes gravely.

"Then you shall not say any more. Do you think it is very long for me to wait? Do you forget how long I have waited for more than this? Does it matter whose daughter I am?"

"Not to me," he responded promptly.

"And you are the only one that matters—to me," she said, with her exquisite candour.

She obtained the Princess's consent to accompany them, and went down to Thorden Hall the next day. Sir Reginald, Vane, and Evelyn were waiting in the hall to welcome Cara, and, as she appeared, Evelyn almost sprang at Cara, caught her in her arms, and after a kiss, which was returned as warmly as it was given, held her at arm's length and scanned her with eager affection.

"Oh, I'm so glad, Cara! To think that 'blood will tell,' and he bowed over her hand, as one bows over that of an equal, as he had just before bowed over that of the Princess.

"Welcome, my dear young lady, to your future home!" he said.

"And to our hearts, dear," whispered Evelyn quickly.

"They gathered round her, unobtrusively fussed over her, with the art nice people possess in such perfection; and Evelyn administered tea; but there was an air of suppressed excitement, of uncertainty about them all; and presently Evelyn drew Cara's arm within hers, and led her upstairs to Cara's room. There she took Cara in her arms again, murmuring little broken sentences of love and joy in her presence, to all of which Cara responded in her grave, sweet way; but after awhile she said:

"Ronald says you will tell me—"

Evelyn drew her to a sofa and, seating herself beside her, held both her hands.

"Yes, I know, dear! And I don't know how to begin—"

"Tell me who my father is," said Cara in a low voice. "Tell me who the man—ah; it is hard to forget that I thought myself his daughter! Don't speak ill of him—he is dead! And yet how can you speak of him without speaking ill? How—how did I fall into his hands?"

"He stole you, Cara. Try and be calm, dear one! It is a cruel story. He told it all just before he died."

In a few words as possible she told the story of the murder, the theft of the ruby, the abduction of Sir Mortimer's child. Cara's face grew white, her eyes were fixed on the wall opposite her, and for a time she seemed incapable of speech; then, at last, she faltered:

"Then—then I am the daughter of Sir Mortimer; I am a Desborough?"

"Yes, Cara, a cousin—one ever so far removed—of mine, of Ronald's. You are the daughter of Sir Mortimer, and his heiress."

"His heiress? You mean that I am rich?" she asked, with no eagerness, with something approaching indifference.

Evelyn nodded.

"Yes, dear. I think you must be very rich."

"I shall have Sir Mortimer's money?"

"Yes; and it has been 'saving up' for you all this time. And the ruby. Do not forget the ruby that Vane—she blushed—"Vane found."

"Ah, yes, the ruby!" said Cara absently. "And—and you say my father—Lemuel Raven—left to me all he possessed?"

Evelyn nodded.

"Everything, dear."

(To be Continued.)

Keep two measuring glasses for medicine—one for drops and one for the larger doses.

Use dried fruits as much as possible in the winter when fresh fruit is scarce or dear.

SEAL BRAND COFFEE

Prized equally in hospital and home, because no other Coffee is at once so rich, so strong, so delicate, and so unfailingly good.

In ½, 1 and 2 pound cans. Whole—ground—pulverized—also Fine Ground for Percolators.

CHASE & SANBORN, MONTREAL.

Phyllis Dearborn

OR, THE

Countess of Basingwell

CHAPTER I.

Sir Lionel Warne was going the pace. By that is meant that he was doing every conceivable thing to be rid of his money, or anything that represented money.

He kept race-horses and hunters, and he sat late over the cards, and everybody knows that he need have done nothing else to have sent that goodly fortune of his to the dogs.

Then, it was proverbial that no one gave such suppers as Sir Lionel.

Suppers! Oh, but there are suppers, and suppers. The things that are eaten, and the things that are drunk, even, do not come to go very much—it is what we may call the accessories that count. But, not to go too closely into that matter, let it suffice that Sir Lionel had been known to lay out a thousand guineas on a supper.

Of course, wise people shook their heads or shrugged their shoulders, and said what more foolish ones could have said just as well—that the end would come some fine day. Yes, they ate his suppers, and rode his hunters, and borrowed his money, and then prophesied.

As for Sir Lionel, he never checked an extravagant thought that entered his handsome head; he never lost his good, his jolly good humor when he paid his bills, which he always did; he never refused to lend when he had it; and he never borrowed a penny of anybody—that is, of any friend or acquaintance. He patronized the usurers, of course, but that is another matter.

Another matter, indeed; but it brings us to one afternoon toward the end of the season, when Sir Lionel, in dressing-gown and slippers, sat lounging in an easy-chair in his delightful smoking-room. Any one might have supposed that even so young a man would wear a bored, tired expression on his face when alone, for he had tasted in quick succession of all the experiences that money could procure him—and what will not money procure?

CALL 100 WOMEN

Ask them what they think of Zam-Buk and you will be surprised how many of them would tell you it is the best known healing balm, and that it should be in every home. A contest in "Everywoman's World" recently proved this!

Women from coast to coast have proved by actual test that Zam-Buk is unequalled for the skin diseases and injuries of children as well as of adults. They have found Zam-Buk different to ordinary ointments in that it always the irritation as soon as applied; prevents festering, inflammation, blood poisoning, etc., and permanently heals in a very short time. As a mother and head of a family you owe it to yourself to have Zam-Buk always handy!

If you have not yet tried Zam-Buk, get a box at once. Druggists and stores, 50c.

ZAMBUK

Evening Telegram Fashion Plates.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

1531 - A PRETTY FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL.

Bored! tired! Sir Lionel, even as he lounged and puffed the lazy clouds of smoke in circling rings from his mouth, looked as fresh and hopeful and interested as a schoolboy; only, with all its beauty, his face was not of the schoolboy type at all. It was gay, careless, languid, even, but no one ever made the mistake of suspecting its owner of a lack of manhood.

Even those who played upon his follies and abetted them, always had an unpleasant suspicion that he was so far from being a victim that he actually took a pleasure in seeing how base they could be. There would come a bantering expression in his blue eyes, and under his tawny mustache, his upper lip would curl satirically, so that the human leeches who had at the first of his reckless career fastened themselves on him finally let go their hold, feeling that he had all the while been secretly mocking them.

He was not a cynic, however, and he was not and made no pretense of being base. He was a true friend, and could fall headlong in love as readily as any other of his years. And when it was generally understood that Sir Lionel was no fool the wonder became all the greater that he permitted himself to run such a mad course.

There were those who explained it by saying that he was ambitious and would make any sacrifice to be the fashion. Perhaps so. Certainly he was the fashion. As much so as Lady Flora Vanemore, the most imperious of London beauties. Men copied his coats and the tie of his caravat. If he wore a scarf, then the scarf was the thing to wear. If he wore a tie, then the tie became the rage. If his collars rolled, then the collars of the young aristocrats rolled.

There were others who said that he intended to reimburse himself by marrying a rich wife; but when it was discovered that he passed by the scores of willing heiresses, and cast himself at the feet of Lady Flora, that hypothesis had to be rejected, for Lady Flora was rich only in beauty.

Of course there were fifty other theories to explain why he was getting rid of his fortune so rapidly; but in the end most persons were content to wonder and wait, feeling quite sure that when the crash came it would do so in an entirely novel manner, and that it would not be accompanied by any of those disagreeable episodes that usually attended the downfall of the spendthrift.

But once more let us look in at him as he lies there lazily puffing at his Havanas. He had sent an expert to Havana to try the tobaccos; and then having found the brand to suit him had bought up the whole output. Of course he enjoyed his cigars after that. As he said himself, it would have been a shame not to experience an ecstasy whenever he smoked a cigar procured under such circumstances, and so he always made it a point to enjoy his cigar.

(To be Continued.)

Household Notes.

Table linen should be ironed only on the wrong side.

Dry sponge cake may be served smothered in custard.

New bread will cut very smoothly if the knife is heated.

Black stocking legs make excellent cloths for sponging a dark suit.

If the bureau drawers stick, apply wax; it will be better than soap.

If a child should get pepper in its eyes, bathe them freely with milk.

A step saver is the table that can be wheeled about the kitchen and pantry.

Boiling soda water is one of the best disinfectants for kitchen plumbing.

Fruit whips and custards are among the best things for an invalid's dessert.

Fruit trees should be trimmed a little every year and not much in any one year.

Sand or salt will put out flames from oil or alcohol; water will cause them to spread.

Evening Telegram Fashion Plates.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

1531 - A PRETTY FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL.

Bored! tired! Sir Lionel, even as he lounged and puffed the lazy clouds of smoke in circling rings from his mouth, looked as fresh and hopeful and interested as a schoolboy; only, with all its beauty, his face was not of the schoolboy type at all. It was gay, careless, languid, even, but no one ever made the mistake of suspecting its owner of a lack of manhood.

Even those who played upon his follies and abetted them, always had an unpleasant suspicion that he was so far from being a victim that he actually took a pleasure in seeing how base they could be. There would come a bantering expression in his blue eyes, and under his tawny mustache, his upper lip would curl satirically, so that the human leeches who had at the first of his reckless career fastened themselves on him finally let go their hold, feeling that he had all the while been secretly mocking them.

He was not a cynic, however, and he was not and made no pretense of being base. He was a true friend, and could fall headlong in love as readily as any other of his years. And when it was generally understood that Sir Lionel was no fool the wonder became all the greater that he permitted himself to run such a mad course.

There were those who explained it by saying that he was ambitious and would make any sacrifice to be the fashion. Perhaps so. Certainly he was the fashion. As much so as Lady Flora Vanemore, the most imperious of London beauties. Men copied his coats and the tie of his caravat. If he wore a scarf, then the scarf was the thing to wear. If he wore a tie, then the tie became the rage. If his collars rolled, then the collars of the young aristocrats rolled.

There were others who said that he intended to reimburse himself by marrying a rich wife; but when it was discovered that he passed by the scores of willing heiresses, and cast himself at the feet of Lady Flora, that hypothesis had to be rejected, for Lady Flora was rich only in beauty.

Of course there were fifty other theories to explain why he was getting rid of his fortune so rapidly; but in the end most persons were content to wonder and wait, feeling quite sure that when the crash came it would do so in an entirely novel manner, and that it would not be accompanied by any of those disagreeable episodes that usually attended the downfall of the spendthrift.

But once more let us look in at him as he lies there lazily puffing at his Havanas. He had sent an expert to Havana to try the tobaccos; and then having found the brand to suit him had bought up the whole output. Of course he enjoyed his cigars after that. As he said himself, it would have been a shame not to experience an ecstasy whenever he smoked a cigar procured under such circumstances, and so he always made it a point to enjoy his cigar.

(To be Continued.)

Household Notes.

Table linen should be ironed only on the wrong side.

Dry sponge cake may be served smothered in custard.

New bread will cut very smoothly if the knife is heated.

Black stocking legs make excellent cloths for sponging a dark suit.

If the bureau drawers stick, apply wax; it will be better than soap.

If a child should get pepper in its eyes, bathe them freely with milk.

A step saver is the table that can be wheeled about the kitchen and pantry.

Boiling soda water is one of the best disinfectants for kitchen plumbing.

Fruit whips and custards are among the best things for an invalid's dessert.

Fruit trees should be trimmed a little every year and not much in any one year.

Sand or salt will put out flames from oil or alcohol; water will cause them to spread.

N.B.—Be sure to cut out the illustration and send with the coupon, carefully filled out. The pattern can not reach you in less than 15 days.

SALE! SALE!

AT COST PRICES, ALL OUR STOCK OF

Ladies' Winter HATS,

in White and Colored Felt Hats and Black Felt and Velvet Hats.

This lot of Hats are all of the latest styles and made from superior Felts and Velvets, finished with fast dyes. You only have to see and price them to buy.

Feathers, Tips, Wings, etc.,

New arrivals, also at cost.

HENRY BLAIR

REGAL SHOES

are the most stylish, comfortable and serviceable ready-to-wear shoes made—and every man in town can prove this by coming to us and selecting a pair from the new styles we have just received.

A Smart Regal Style For Dressy Men

Every one of these Regal styles is built exactly after a high-priced New York custom model. Exact fit is assured you by Regal quarter-sizes—just double the usual number of shoe-fittings. Do not put off paying us a visit—drop in to-day

PARKER & MONROE, Limited.

SLATTERY'S Wholesale Dry Goods House

Being in close touch with the American Markets, can quote the finest wholesale prices on all classes of POUND REMNANTS and REGULAR PIECE GOODS, FLEECE LINED UNDERWEAR, MATS, RUGS and CARPETS, etc.

Before placing your Fall Order, we would appreciate an opportunity to quote our prices.

SOLE AGENT for the Leader Overall Co. (Local manufacture).

Slattery Building, Duckworth and George's Streets, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND. P. O. Box 236. Phone 522.

Bargains in STAIR CLOTH!

Just received a small shipment of Stair Oil Cloth, all neat and attractive designs. Our prices

11c. and 15c. per yard while they last. Outport orders promptly attended to.

WILLIAM FREW.

War News

Messages Received Previous to 9

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Jan. 10. The Governor, Newfoundland, reports that the British Headquarters artillery activity at several points. On the morning of the 8th, the Germans exploded a mine near La Bassée.

The French report an air bombardment of Sturka, near Metz. As the Germans entered the village they were caught by a fire of seventy-fives. South of Metz, the Germans were seen to be engaged in taking a little hill north of the summit of the Huns with heavy losses to the Germans.

Russians report an encounter between their torpedo boats and the Goeben. The torpedo boats were to the protection of the Russian fleet of the line, and, after a brief long range, the Goeben withdrew.

A Teheran telegram announces that the Russians have defeated a rebel force at Dosabakh.

KING EDWARD'S CREW AT CHATHAM.

LONDON, Jan. 10. A despatch to the Daily Mail from Chatham, says that a train of men from the sunken battleship "Edwards" arrived here on Sunday afternoon, and were taken direct to the Navy barracks.

BRITAIN AND HER ALLIES CONSENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. Britain and her Allies, it was announced to-day, have given consent to the American Red Cross Society's plan to accumulate hospital supplies, meant for hospital use in Germany and Allied countries. The consent, however, applies only to the present accumulation of supplies. Shipments will have to be held pending arrangements with the German Government.

THE GALLIOLI RETIREMENT.

LONDON, Jan. 10. The British retirement from Gallipoli was referred to by Premier Asquith in addressing the House this afternoon. "The retirement will be with extreme gratification to the retirement of the forces at Cape Helles on the Gallipoli peninsula without the loss of a single man," the Premier said. "Of 11 guns behind, 10 were worn out by the bombardments, which were rendered more difficult by the loss of the service before they were abandoned. All the stores and munitions which could be removed were sent on before the retirement. The whole retirement was conducted with a minimum loss. These operations taken in conjunction with the earlier operations at Suvla and Anzac, are, I believe, without parallel in naval history. They should have been carried out without any loss, considering the amount of personnel and material involved, is an achievement whereof we are all proud, commanding officers and men of both services. It will be proud. It deserves, and it is sure to receive the profound gratitude of King and Country and an imperishable place in our national history. His Majesty will be pleased that Generals Monro, Birdwood, Davies and other officers should receive special recognition."

BRITISH PURSUE RETREATING TURKS.

LONDON, Jan. 10. The Turks in Mesopotamia were full retreat on Jan. 8th with the British pursuing them, it was announced in the Commons to-day by J. Chamberlain, Secretary for War. There has been heavy fighting on the banks of the Tigris, on Jan. 7th, the British announcement stated, and the British had taken in two days 600 guns and 700 prisoners. In the Commons the news of the British success on the Tigris, Chamberlain said that General Aylmer, the Miam Alligarh on June 6th, led troops, marching to the relief of Kut, to Amara. On the same day General Townshend at Kut, reported that the previous night the enemy had come heavy fire on the northwest front on the village opposite Kut, but had made no attack. On the night of

LIGHT, WA

The proprietor of one of the systems is credited with the most widely known and most successful lighting effect. He was asked to explain how he believed in the trinity of light, heat, and moisture until they were turned into a warm, comfortable radiance, and the rest is history.

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but than imagine the kind of light that opens, for we pass it in a moment to the street, to one in a moment of welcome and invitation on the pathway, and lets one see the fearful lighting effect, the so obstructiveness, the absence of light that if one would stand facing a delicious sense of well-being—all these are part of the individuality.

We cordially invite all to our showroom and to see the results of the adoption of which is from a London patent made by X. Lamp and GASTMAN and GASTMAN.

ST. JOHN'S GAS

dec.11