LADY LAURA'S RELEASE

THE STORY OF A SPOILED BEAUTY.

CHAPTER XVII.

She had never been absolutely jealous. Her first husband had treated her with such loving tenderness that the feeling had never been awakened in her heart. She had felt the first symptoms of jealousy when Angela told her that the captain loved Gladys Rane; since then it had lain dormant; there had been nothing to arouse it. But on this night of the ball the captain looked so gallant and so handsome that she thought every woman in the room must find him irresistible as she herself did. She was attired in an exquisite dress of pale blue velvet, and her magnificent pearls suited her to perfection. The captain owned to himself that there was no handsomer woman in the room, while Lady Laura looked with anxious eyes at the many fair young faces.

"Vance," she said, "there are a great many pretty faces here to-night."
"Yes; they are pleasant to gaze upon," he observed.
Then she looked up at him with laughing eyes, the wistfulness of which he did not see.
"Vance, you must not admire them, you must not flirt with anybody, for I am jealous of your every smile."
"My dear Laura," said the captain, gallantly, "you are the most beautiful woman in the room. If I flirt with any one, it will be with you." They he added to himself, "My reward for that speech ought to be a waltz with every pretty girl in the room."

Husbands and wife were standing together when Angela entered the ball-room. She had never looked

CHAPTER XVII.

Vance Wynyard found the autumn long; and the winter dragged still more monotonously. However, he managed to get through them by dint of continued gaieties. There seemed to be no end to them. There were fancy-balls, private theatricals, charade-parties, dinner-parties—hardly a day passed without something of the kind; and Rood Abbey soon became as famous for its hospitality as it was for its natural charms.

The captain lost none of his popularity as master of Rood Abbey, and it was generally agreed that Lady Laura had done a wise thing in marrying him; she was just then the most envied woman in the county.

By forcing excitement, the captain managed to tolerate his new mode of existence. Yet, even with all these consolations, he found it hard, and he vowed to himself that this state of things should not occur again. Next year he would fill the house with his own friends—men of his own stamp, and women who knew how to be amusing.

"My wife is beautiful and sweet-tempered, but she has not an idea beyond looking pretty and being admired. I should like a little less love and a little more wit," he often said to himself.

The plain truth was that in six months he had completely tired of the wife whom he had married for money. He was tired of her fair beauty, tired of the sweetness of her manner, tired of her unvarying amiability; above all, he was unutterably bored by her passionate worship of himself, although she had not yet found it out.

It would have been perfectly useless to speak to her or warn her. Lady Wynyard would perhaps have been happy for a few months longer if she had loved her husband less, or if she had refrained from showing her passionate worship of him. As it was, she, as he phrased it to himself, bored him most horribly. She was never happy out of his presence; she liked to spend every moment of her time with him; she was jealous and miserable if he paid the least attention to any one else.

No love-sick girl could have shown more unmistakable symptoms of love-fever than she did. Autumn and winter were over now and Captain Wynyard hailed the spring with unbounded satisfaction. "Talk of surfeiting a bee with honey," he said to himself, "I am surfeited with my wife's beauty and adoration."

And there rose before him the fair face of the woman he adored and had forsaken, the one of whom he never tired. Lady Laura had offered some feeble resistance when the proposal to spend the season in London was first discussed. It was at the beginning of April, and the primroses were all out, the grass was of the loveliest, and most tender green, the buds were forming on the trees, the odor of sweet violets filled the air.

"Rood is so charming just now," she said to her husband; "I wish we were going to spend the spring here."

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS

"California Fig Syrup" is Child's Best Laxative.

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again. Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

His Marching Orders.

He had been worshipping her for months, but had never told her, and she didn't want him to. He had come often, and stayed late, and she could only sigh and hope. He was going away the next day and he thought the last night was the time to spring the momentous question. He kept it to himself, however, until the last thing, it was 11.30 by the clock.

"Miss Johnson" he began, tranquilly, "I am going away to-morrow."
"Are you?" she said, with the thoughtlessness of girlhood, as she gazed wistfully at the clock.
"Yes," he replied; "are you sorry?"
"Yes, very sorry," she murmured.
"I thought you might go away this evening."

Then she again gazed at the clock wistfully, and he went out into the cold, unsympathetic world.
