When Cook came to the scales, however, it was found that the jockey who weighed out at only five pounds over weight, was now nine pounds over the weight assigned, or four beyond the limit. This atone aroused suspicion. Manager Carrook the boy to a private room, and searching him found an electric battery fastened around his waist with wires running from it to the spurs. The contrivance was very simple. The electricity was carried or generated in four small tubes arranged in a belt which was almost the exact counterpart of a cartridge belt. It was worn next the body, and running down it on either side was a wire attached to the spurs. The electricity was turned on or off by means of a small switch which the jockey could easily manipulate. He pressed the button—the horse did or tried, as he never tried before, to do the rest.

DEADLY PARALLEL NO. 2.

The best evidence of the soundness of the position of the Liberal lawyers that the notices served on the bogus voters were perfectly valid is to be found in the attitude taken on them by the judges before whom they were brought. ruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stemach, and instead of heing a healthy nutriment it becomes a poisen to the system. Dr. Parmelee's Vegatable Pills are wonderful cerrectives of such troubles. They correct acidity, epen the secretions and conver the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the mane of a challenged person who does not appear to answer a protest against his qualification. The London revising efficer on Dec. 4 accordingly struck off the names of a large number of Conservatives who would not or did not appear.

Now came a new appeal by the Conservatives, It was to Judge Elliot, and it was based on a plea in which Judge Elliot was the Ottawa Journal, Independent

It is rarely indeed that the Bench is im It is rarely indeed that the Bench is impeached in Parliament. Judge Elliot, of London, attains a very unusual notoristy. Intrusted with the dispensation of justice to his fellow men, almost the most sacred trust that can be placed in the hands of a human being, Judge Elliot is accused of willfully, deliberately, and for low and mean ends, violating his sacred trust. This which he is accused of doing is a far grave erime than any ordinary felony. If the accusation is proven in Parliament to be well-founded, the petition which a Liberal member, Mr. Lister, offers calling for a declaration of Judge Elliot's unfitness to remain on the bench, should neither be disregarded nor dodged by the Conservative majority.

The facts as we understand them are as

During the revision of the voters' list in During the revision of the voters list in London last November, the Liberals entered protests against several hundred names which the revising officer proposed to place on the list. By the Franchise Act, the Liberals were required to state the grounds on which the protests were entered. With regard to this, the Liberals first simply gave the words "not qualified" in a large number of cases, those, we believe, of number of cases, those, we believe, of persons claiming the right to vote on in-

The Concervatives, one would imagine, were right about this. The revising officer thought so. He notified the Liberals on Nov. 10 that their protests were not fairly made. But he also took the fair and equitable course of giving the Liberals an opportunity to put in proper protests. He gave them three days to amend their pracests. As there were several hundred protests, it will be imagined that the Liberals had to hustle. But they did it, and by Nov. 13 mailed and amended protests not only to the revising officer, but to each Conservative whom they protested, as by law they were bound to do.

This settled the question with the revising officer. He proceeded to hear the protests, holding court on Dec. 4. A number of protested Conservatives did not appear. They were not content with, or feared to accept, the ruling of the Court of Queen's Bench. They appealed to the Court of Appeal at Toronto, and meanwhile they took the liberty of staying away from the revising officer's court. By the Franchise Act a revising officer may strike off the name of a challenged person who does not appear to answer a protest against his on record as on their side. Two hundred and twenty-nine Conservatives who had refused to appear before the revising officer on the ground that the Liberal protests were invalid, or who for other reasons failed to appear, and had been struck off by the revising officer, now asked Judge Elliot to replace them on the voters' list. These men had attempted by a legal technicality to burk inquiry in the first place; when the legal technicality was settled, they had still tried to burk lair investigation of their standing; in attempting to do this, they had defied the law both of the revising officer and of the Court of Queen's Bench; and now they harked back to Judge Elliot, evidently trusting that he too would defy the Queen' Bench.

Ludge Elliot hesitated. The appeal came evidence on either side, stating that inas-much as the 229 Conservatives whose cases much as the 229 Conservatives whose cases were in question had appealed from the Queen's Bench to the Court of Appeal, he would reserve his judgment until the Court of Appeal had spoken. You will observe that all this is a pretty knotty complication, and that it is little wonder there is so much to be said on one side or the other, and so many loopholes for the escape of an honest verdiet.

racically it indorsed the Court of Queen's Bench, vindicated the Liberals and confirmed the Conservative defeat; technically, it gave Judge Elliot an opportunity to have his own way. The Court of Appeal gave no formal judgment. It held there was no necessity to do so, inasmuch as the revising officer had acted on the order of the Court of Queen's Bench, and had dealt with the disputed names. The judges of the Court of Appeal, however, expressed their personal opinions, or at least three out of four did. Judge Osler did not say anything. The other three, Chief Justice Hagarty and Justices Burton and Maclennas, personally remarked that Queen's Hagarty and Justices Burton and Maclennan, personally remarked that Queen's Bench was right, and the original Liberal protests quite sufficient. Judge Maclennan said that it would be "an intolerable scandal" if such technicalities as that claimed by the Conservatives were allowed to prevail. Chief Justice Hagarty added that even if the original notices were insufficient the revising officer had power to allow and did allow them to be amended.

Meanwhile the election was drawing content. They held that the Liberals had not the right, either by equity or the Franchise Act, to force electors to appear before the revising officer to answer so vague a charge as "not qualified." They held that the Liberals were required by the wording of the Franchise Act to make a more specific complaint, for instance to say that the person's income was below the standard required by the act, or that he was not of age, or not a British subject, or something of that kind.

The Conservatives, one would imagine, were right about this. The revising officer to make and court of Appeal being out of the way, to proceed with the was not of age, or not a British subject, or something of that kind.

The Conservatives, one would imagine, were right about this. The revising officer to hought so. He notified the Liberals on Nov. 10 that their protests were not fairly made. But he also took the fair and equitable course of giving the Liberals an opportunity to put in proper protests. He gave them three days to amend their pretests. As there were several hundred protests, it will be imagined that the Liberals had to hustle. But they did it, and by Nov. 13 malled and amended protests not only to the revising officer, but to the conservatives announced that they would appear to the closure of Appeal to the conservatives announced that they would appear to the Conservatives announced that they would appear to the closure of the disputed electors retained on the voters' list marked by the letter A content of Appeal had spoken on Feb. 18. The Liberals were helpless. The Conservatives did not carry any appeal to the Supreme Court. Nothing was left for the Liberals but to ask Judge Elliot to deliver Liberals but to ask Judge Elliot to deliver his long delayed judgment. It was a forlorn hope. Even that the Conservatives did not willingly grant their opponents, for their lawyer objected to Judge Elliot giving decision, alleging that the Supreme Court would yet be asked to deal with the matter. The Conservative counselneed not have been afraid; Judge Elliot was perfectly safe—for him. Despite the adverse opinions of the six judges of superior courts—of every other judge who had spoken—despite the fact that it was only too apparent that all along the Conservative aim had been to burk investigation and vote by hook or by crook—Judge Elliot calmly decided the Liberal protests invalid, the Conservative votes good, the Hon. John Carling a legal representative of London in the House of Commons. His judgment concluded:

I hold that this appeal is sustained, and tha hese persons thus distinguished by the lette A were entitled to vote. I hold their persons thus distinguished by the letter A were entitled to vote. If they did vote, I hold their votes must be treated as good votes, and the declaration of the returning officer as to the result of the poll does not require any change as far as I am concerned.

There was no legal appeal against this. Nothing remained for the Liberals but the step which Mr. Lister is attempting in Parliament—the impeachment of the judge. Mr. Lister alleges a further fact, of which we know nothing, that during all this contesting in London, Judge Elliot was writing Conservative articles in the Free Press, the Conservative paper there. The truth of this would be damning; but to our mind proof of it is not needed to cause honest Canadians to blush at the dishonor of the London Conservatives, and of the county judge of Middlesex.
