The closest attention was paid to the speakers, which was to be expected, considering the high status of intelligence which characterized the audience. Many of those present were seen to examine closely the diagrame and charts, illustrative of the work of the Liberal Administration, which Mr. McEvoy had caused to be hung on the wall. Mr. McEvoy had also distributed some literature of the same class, believing the main thing to be done was to present the facts and figures before the electors of the east riding. He was confident that their good brains would

Then Mr. Elson says I am a "lawyer from London." I don't dispute that fact. Because Mr. Elson is keeping a farm, and I a law office, does that affect the question as to whether which of us would make the best representative? The very first five men on Mr. Elson's bill of speakers are lawyers. (Applause.) Mr. McEvoy then went on to say that he thought the ideal method for political meetings, was for the two rival candidates to come on the platform together, and argue out the que tions is the good old style.
