Rithet by his office staff, is one of the finest samples of work of the kind that has ever been executed in Victoria. The design is handsome and the colors, ich and harmonious; in the middle of the border, at top, sides and bottom, the fac-similes of the seals of Victoria, Honolul, Liverpool and San Francisco, where the offices of the firm are located. The artist was Mr. F. Thomas, of the Colonist lithographing department.

Montreal's New Mayer. Late Montreal advices announce the election to the mayoralty of Hon. James McShane, formerly a member of the Mercier administration, over Mr. Grenier, who had for the last two years occupied the civic chair. Mr. McShane's personal popularity no doubt ensured his success, Mr. Grenier being an evidently strong man. Mr. McShane is one of the most hearty and sympathetic of men, and has hundreds of friends of all nationalities and religions.

How the city authorities propose to destroy unlicensed dogs is a question that is worthy of attention. The practice of shooting the tagless ones on the streets has been said to have been practically decided on. This means wounded dogs in the majority of cases, for policemen are not generally dead shots. There are many incidental objections, and it is to be hoped that the dogs that are not licensed to live, will, this year, be netted before they are killed, and killed without torture.

Beacon Will Amusements. It is a most enjoyable sight to witness a game of Rugby football played between boys under the age of fifteen. There was no boys under the age of fifteen. There was no rough playing, yesterday afternoon, and the little fellows showed a great deal of skill in passing and dodging. The Oak Leaves were somewhat the heaviest team of the two, but the James Bay boys made equally as many good plays. Mr. Lorimer acted as field captain and referee, and the boys looked to

MR. GREGORY RETURNS. His Mission Successful-Incidents of in Winter Trip.

Mr. F. B. Gregory, of the legal firm of Belyea & Gregory, returned from Alaska, yesterday, by the steamer Alki, which touched at Departure Bay, long enough to allow him to catch the train for home. His northern trip has just occupied five weeks, and Mr. Gregory was successful in the business which took him from home—to procure a certified copy of the proceedings in the W. P. Sayward case, which was tried at Sitka, on July 9, 1887. In the far north, the sealing question is regarded as much more serious even than it is here. The Alaskans talk of possible war with England, and the Collector at Sitka is quoted as saying that he shouldered his rifle for Uncle Sam once, and is ready to again.

In the five weeks he has been gone, Mr. Gregory says it rained every day but two, but fortunetals. The annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-Fellows will commence on Wednesday next. A grand banquet will take place at the Delmonico restaurant on Friday. Chinese New Year.

All day yesterday Chinatown presented a very animated appearance, the national flags and standards being prominently displayed on all hands. Fire-crackers were also extensively burned, but it was not until midnight that the great racket began. Hundreds and thousands of crackers were exploded, interspersed with bombs. Fires were lighted in the streets and there was a general turn-out of Celestials, all in their est. The various Joss houses were hronged and numerous and valuable offerings were made. As a host "John" is in his element, and, to-day, will entertain his friends and customers in handsome style.

This Meraing's Fire.

"Too Muchee New Year," was the first thing heard by a reporter, before the hose was turned on at this morning's fire. It was a Chinaman speaking, and proprietor of the house on fire. The back wash house of a Chinaman's shanty or wash room was consumed, the front part being saved by the promptices of the fire department. John Weilers factory was next door to the fire, but only secured a slight scorch. Very little damage was done. The alarm was turned in shortly after two o'clock, and the lames made quite a bright light for a few minutes. An over-turned stove, or the setting off of fire crackers, started the blaze.

A singular coincidence, and one pointing to the same individual being the guilty party, is that a fire has occurred in this city for the past three years on the night of the 7th February, the origin of which was evidently incendiary. The crime was repeated last evening, in the house of Mrs. J. E. Englehardt, 28 Belcher street, between Vancouver and Cook streets. The house is a brand new one, and has never been occupied. The firemen were called out at 11.30 p.m., and when they arrived on the scene they found the house in flames, and the smell of coal oil was easily noticeable. Each room on the ground floor of the house was saturated with the oil, and it is supposed that the incendiary must have used fully five gallons in carrying out his work. Boston Globe, who basn't heard of old "Bill" Gerrity, the blacksmith, who for forty years has worked the bellows and bounded the anvil in his little shop on fremont street, near the Mission church? If you haven't heard of "Bill" surely have heard of his wife, who stands at the anvil all day and, with sturdy strokes, swings the hammer and fashions the iron, supple under the heat, while her husband assists her. "Bill," as he is familiarly called is form have become, as it were, one of the old landmarks of old Roxbury, so rich in its coterie of oldest inhabitants, while his little shop stands to-day, as it did forty years ago, undismayed by the presence all around it of modern buildings, which make its crude outlines stand out more forcibly and shows its age by comparison.

If you ask "Bill" how old he is he will tell you he is sixty years, but if you ask one of the old settlers he will tell you that according to his "reckonin" Bill must be "nigh on to ninety years."

If "Bill" was a picturesque character, insomuch that his occupation as village blacksmith rendered it proper to so characterize a man in time gone by, he was undered more so when two years age to startled his friends by taking to the altar a buxom lass of thirty-five were many stories floating around among the regulation gossips concern ing the wealth that she had left behind her in her little apartments over the blacksmith shop. According to the stories she was one of those people who are said to deny themselves the pleaseres of life and hoard up in mysterious hiding-places bags of yellow gold, and in the still hours of night find consolation in fondling the shiny pieces.

Some believed these stories, for it was well known that the old blacksmith worked early and late at his forge and llways had lots of work to do. He was known to be of a saving disposition, and it was said that his wife, having passed the allotted threescore and ten line, de-termined that, when her somewhat younger husband should find himself alone and bent down with the results of ard work, he would not want for plenty to eat or a place to lay his head i ney could procure them.

According to the stories that have be come a chapter in the "Old Settlers' Biographical History of Events from Personal Knowledge," when she died there was great excitement on the "Hill." She had left relatives of various generations, and it is said that, several thousand dollars having been discovered, a good many people shared it posides the old blacksmith. Since then, owing to the effects of competition, "Bill" has not done the rushing business he did formerly, and then, too, he is not able to work as hard as before.

His present wife learned of this change of affairs and without standing on cere nony she went to him and volunteered to work at the forge and save the ex-pense of his hiring a helper. "Bill" only laughed at her, for, besides being a Testimental to Their Employer.

The young lady did not like this performance and told him so.

smell of coal oil was easily noticeable. Each room on the ground floor of the house was saturated with the oil, and it is supposed that the incendiary must have used fully five gallons in carrying out his work. The flam s were noticed first by Mr. A. Davis. who lives next door, and he did good work in checking the spread of the fire. The firemen used the small extinguishers, and managed to entirely extinguish the balance of the fire before any serious damage was done. It is suggested that the person that turns in the alarm should stand at the box and direct the firemen and others where
