

pathy.

British in War by the

by the World checks Most

nds for Rights for Civil-

Referring editorially to the war in the Transvaal, the writer says that the British cause is not only religious and moral, but also political and economic.

The writer expresses sympathy for the British cause and notes the moral and political implications of the conflict.

The writer discusses the political and economic aspects of the war, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The writer continues to discuss the political and economic aspects of the war, focusing on the role of the colonies.

The writer discusses the political and economic aspects of the war, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The writer discusses the political and economic aspects of the war, particularly the impact on the colonies.

Personal Paraphs.

Gossip of Notable Hotel Guests or Residents Whom Everyone Knows.

Government Surveyors Return From a Season in Northern British Columbia.

John S. O'Dwyer, the chief of the party, and F. J. Robinson, one of his associates, returned yesterday, having returned by the Princess Louisa.

The surveyors report on their findings in Northern British Columbia, including details about the terrain and resources.

The surveyors discuss the challenges they faced during their expedition and the progress of their work.

The surveyors provide further details about their work in Northern British Columbia, including the impact of the war.

The surveyors discuss the political and economic aspects of their work, particularly the impact of the war.

The surveyors discuss the political and economic aspects of their work, particularly the impact of the war.

The surveyors discuss the political and economic aspects of their work, particularly the impact of the war.

Denver, Col., were at the Victoria yesterday.

Resolution Favoring It Carried at the Public Meeting in Chilliwack.

Procedings Enlivened by Wordy Tilt Between Members of the Committee.

Between thirty-five and forty persons gathered in Semple's hall, Victoria West, last night, to hear the Victoria-Chilliwack railway scheme explained by Mr. O. E. Renout.

The meeting was a lively one, with members of the committee engaged in a wordy dispute over the details of the railway scheme.

The meeting continued with further discussion and debate among the attendees.

The meeting concluded with a resolution favoring the railway scheme, despite the earlier disputes.

The meeting was a significant event in the local community, drawing attention to the railway project.

The meeting was a significant event in the local community, drawing attention to the railway project.

The meeting was a significant event in the local community, drawing attention to the railway project.

Railway to Chilliwack.

Resolution Favoring It Carried at the Public Meeting in Chilliwack.

Procedings Enlivened by Wordy Tilt Between Members of the Committee.

Between thirty-five and forty persons gathered in Semple's hall, Victoria West, last night, to hear the Victoria-Chilliwack railway scheme explained by Mr. O. E. Renout.

The meeting was a lively one, with members of the committee engaged in a wordy dispute over the details of the railway scheme.

The meeting continued with further discussion and debate among the attendees.

The meeting concluded with a resolution favoring the railway scheme, despite the earlier disputes.

The meeting was a significant event in the local community, drawing attention to the railway project.

The meeting was a significant event in the local community, drawing attention to the railway project.

The meeting was a significant event in the local community, drawing attention to the railway project.

Boer Oligarchy Sees Its Doom

Transvaal's Struggle Not for Freedom but to Perpetuate Injustice.

Mr. Balfour on Efforts to Avoid Conflict—Free State's Position.

London, Oct. 11.—A flood of oratory on the Transvaal situation burst out tonight, Mr. A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, Mr. Henry Herbert Asquith, former home secretary, and others speaking in various parts of the country.

The speakers argued that the Boer struggle was not for freedom but to perpetuate injustice, and that the British government should take action to end the conflict.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

Boer Oligarchy Sees Its Doom

Transvaal's Struggle Not for Freedom but to Perpetuate Injustice.

Mr. Balfour on Efforts to Avoid Conflict—Free State's Position.

London, Oct. 11.—A flood of oratory on the Transvaal situation burst out tonight, Mr. A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, Mr. Henry Herbert Asquith, former home secretary, and others speaking in various parts of the country.

The speakers argued that the Boer struggle was not for freedom but to perpetuate injustice, and that the British government should take action to end the conflict.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

Boer Oligarchy Sees Its Doom

Transvaal's Struggle Not for Freedom but to Perpetuate Injustice.

Mr. Balfour on Efforts to Avoid Conflict—Free State's Position.

London, Oct. 11.—A flood of oratory on the Transvaal situation burst out tonight, Mr. A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, Mr. Henry Herbert Asquith, former home secretary, and others speaking in various parts of the country.

The speakers argued that the Boer struggle was not for freedom but to perpetuate injustice, and that the British government should take action to end the conflict.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

The speakers discussed the political and economic aspects of the conflict, particularly the impact on the colonies.

A Disappointed Audience.

Victorians Fill the Opera House to See "Black Sheep."

"Mistakes Will Happen" by Charles Dickens the Next Attraction.

Seldom has there been a more disappointed audience than that which filled the Victoria theatre to overflowing last evening. They had been led to believe that Hoyt's "A Black Sheep" would be particularly good.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

A Disappointed Audience.

Victorians Fill the Opera House to See "Black Sheep."

"Mistakes Will Happen" by Charles Dickens the Next Attraction.

Seldom has there been a more disappointed audience than that which filled the Victoria theatre to overflowing last evening. They had been led to believe that Hoyt's "A Black Sheep" would be particularly good.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.

The audience was disappointed by the quality of the performance, and the theatre manager is expected to make changes.