Commencing at Hanlan's Point, the reporter looked for the annual damage done to the Island during the winter season, but, proceeding along the west shore, not the slightest trace of damage could be seen either to shore or buildings.

The sand has blown up on the sidewalk four feet deep along the west shore for a short distance and some of the unemployed men of the city could profitably be put to work here for a few days at removing it.

Proceeding around the Island the reporter noticed that a nice piece of ground could be made at a small outlay, which would add greatly to the appearance of Is-
