FRIDAY, April 10th, 1908.

On our first page appears a general article which is contributed by a prominent genealogist of this county. It will doubtless be of interest to many of our readers, especially as it will be a surprise to many that the antecedents of this numerous family comprised a large number of men prominent as jurists, authors, members of Congress, clergymen, etc. We would suggest that persons having copies of Calnek's History of Annapolis County would find it of good value to clip this and succeeding articles and make a scrap book to supplement that valuable work.

Although no fair-minded person is likely to deny the obvious merit of the labor union in its broadest application as a banding together of workmen for the support of their mutual interest, its fundamental theory that wages should be fixed according to time employed and not according to workmanship goes far towards minimizing its influence as a body. The following excerpt from an exchange thus exposes the fallacy of this theory and also the dangerous tendency which underlies it.

The fundamental fallacy of the socialist is that the entire wealth of the community is created by labor and should therefore go entirely to the laborers. As a matter of fact, the wealth of the community is mainly created by machinery whose working is the chief function of labor merely to supervise. As civilization advances the relative amount of labor which has to be performed grows always less and less, and the amount of labor performed by machinery grows more and more. But the argument recurs that labor is indefinitely remunerated, while the remuneration of capital is excessive. As it happens that the rate of wages fixed by the present system of free competition is determined by the value to the community of the services rendered by the laborer, it is difficult to see how an arbitrary standard could be fixed without putting a premium on individual inefficiency and lowering the value of the individual skill. The fallacy that the workman should be rewarded rather according to the efforts which he puts forth than according to the value of these efforts to the community, would certainly work out equally to the detriment of society and of the individuals composing it. But, when even the most moderate of socialistic programmes is demonstrably impossible of realization, the danger becomes sufficiently obvious that the impudence of the socialistic theorist or the privileged classes to his demands should assume the form of desperation and become actively anarchistic.

Pain, anywhere, can be quickly stopped by one of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. Pain always means congestion—unnatural blood pressure. Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets simply cause congested blood away from pain centers. These Tablets—known by drug druggists as Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets—simply equalize the blood circulation and then pain always departs in 20 minutes. 50 Tablets 25 cents. Write Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. for free package. Sold by ROYAL PHARMACY, BRIDGETOWN, BEAR RIVER DRUG STORE, BEAR RIVER.

Adopting the recommendation of the Forestry Commission, the State of New York has purchased 3,500 acres of the Adirondacks, including Mount Marcy and neighboring peaks, to be preserved as a state park. It is now universally recognized that for the future mountain forest regions must be held as public property, because in their nature they are indispensable to the health, security and prosperity of the whole people.

The Tragic Story of Bloody Creek

(From the Nova Scotian, Oct. 2, 1908.)
"The township of Annapolis stretches along the left side of the beautiful river which bears its name. On the Annapolis side the table-land is constituted in many places to a narrow strip by the proximity of the South Mountain to the river, and hill and dale are more gentle undulations as the traveler passes along. Some parts of the road are skirted to the left with large masses of granite boulders, and in some places the granite rises here and there a rugged range from the highland across the road seeking its way to the general base of the mountains which some suggest a hard and rocky, rugged, and unromantic scene above the green coverings, the original founders of which have long since departed to another sphere. About three miles below Bridgetown you pass Bloody Creek, around which a tragic incident of our Provincial history has long a singular interest. About the year 1712, Captain Pigeon and a party of men were sent up in boats from Annapolis to cut wood; they had just reached the side of the creek, and commenced operations when they were attacked by a party of savages, who were lying in ambush, and who killed nearly the whole party, Captain Pigeon included. While passing along a evening close around you, it requires no very vivid imagination to people the little glen with beings of another day. Indeed you can hardly persuade yourself that the dark eyes and scowling visages of the Indians are not hidden beneath the birch leaves, and as the stream rushes under the bridge on which you stand a death-groan will, at times, seem to mingle with the gurgling of its waters."—Joseph Howe.

SOBER MEN WANTED.

A fireman in uniform who enters a liquor saloon in Boston and drinks every one else is in danger of dismissal from the force. The men at the head of the fire-department are determined that firemen shall respect the uniform they wear and the position of responsibility they hold. Unless duty calls them, their place is without the saloon. This desire for men who do not use intoxicating liquors to fill places of responsibility is constantly becoming more apparent. Rail roads, express companies, great manufacturing and mercantile establishments are seeking not for men that are never overcome by liquor, but for men that are total abstainers. All this points to a better era, for the habit of moderate drinking than receives a severe blow.

A MISPLACED SWITCH.

Headless of the fact that it was Sunday evening, and that the ladies might be, and in fact was expected to be, rather low, Deacon Black had invited the minister home to supper. Mrs. Black, mindful of the fact that a small salad was all that could be placed on the board, was horrified at her husband's invitation, but with true hospitality attempted to make the best of the situation.

Leading from the parlor to the dining-room is a passage, dark and so narrow that but one can pass in comfort at a time. With a woman's quick eye, Mrs. Black, who had come into the parlor after laying what she could find on the table, determined to use a variation of the "family hold-back" that so often plays a part when the unexpected guest has come. Following her husband into the passage, on the way to the table, she clatched an arm, and pulling down his head whispered vehemently:

"Don't touch that salad for goodness sake!"

"All right," he answered in a similar whisper. Then the party proceeded to the table.

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Black," exclaimed the minister, as the party sat themselves, "but I feel a little indisposed from the heat today, and I think I will have only a cup of tea."

"Why, that's too bad!" the wife remarked. "I did want you to have a good supper."

"You didn't say anything to me about feeling ill," put in Deacon Black, who, despite the warning, had helped himself to a large portion of the main dish. "If I had known that I wouldn't have pressed you to come."

The clergyman passed the situation off with some slight remark, and a suitable period took his departure.

"Well, John," said Mrs. Black, "I'm glad for your sake that the doctor couldn't eat much, for there was so much and I know how fond you are of salad."

"Yes," said her husband, "but there would have been enough to go round, I think. I can't understand how the doctor accepted my invitation if he was ill."

"Anyway," she answered, "I'm glad I caught you in the passage and warned you about the salad."

"Passage? salad? What are you talking about?" he exclaimed.

"John Black, didn't I speak to you in the passage?" his wife screamed.

"Why, no, the doctor let me go ahead of him after we started!" cried Black. "What did you say?"

YOUTH'S COMPANION

RHEUMATIC PAINS RELIEVED.
Mr. John Stenton, postmaster of Annapolis, Ont., writes: "For the past eight years I suffered from rheumatic pains, and during that time I used many different liniments and remedies for the cure of rheumatism. Last summer I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and got more relief from it than anything I have ever used, and cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers from rheumatic pains." For sale by W. W. WADE AND BEAR RIVER DRUG STORE, BEAR RIVER.

It is estimated that 150,000,000 tons of coal are used annually by the railways of the United States, out of which but 2,500,000 tons are used in drawing the trains, while 142,500,000 tons go up the smoke-stacks. Scientific American.
