The Death List Now Reduced to Twenty.

But the List of Injured Has Been Added To.

Funerals of the Victims Take Place Today, Thursday and Friday.

Graphic Stories by Some of Those Who Went Down in the Wreck.

Enormous Demand for All Editions of The Advertiser.

Today, the second since the frightful disaster at the city hall, finds the reported death list reduced by two, bringing it down to 20. The lad McLean, reported killed, was not even in the hall, and Stewart Harris, market gardener, escaped with a number of bad bruises. While the wounded are being well taken care of, either by public or private benevolence, there has been a steady procession to the city cemeteries this forenoon, with bodies of the victims of the terrible catastrophe. Sympathy for the afflicted ones is so general that large crowds attended the ournful corteges, and there were few dry eyes as the clergymen conducted the services at the graves. Sympathetic elegrams continue to pour in from all parts of Canada, and even from the world, in which many of the sufferers Wilson Smith, of Montreal, sent a most feeling telegram to Mayor Little, and ondolatory telegrams were also receiv ed from the mayors of Owen Sound, St. John, N. B., and other places. The lews was cabled o Great Britain, and early yesterday many cablegrams were received inquiring about former British residents. THE DEAD NUMBER TWENTY. Stewart Harris, of 71 Fullarton street, one of the victims of the city hall disaster, is not dead. The report arose probably from Mr. Harris' resemblance o one of the unfortunates. Neither is young James McLean dead, as at first reported. His body was mistaken for hat of Fortner. A man named John Fellows, of Depper's Corners, was included in the first death roll, but injuiry fails to reveal any such man, living or dead. The deaths, therefore, number twenty, as follows:

Henry Macklin received a cablegram at 4 p.m. from Kilmarnock, Scotland. KILLED BY THE SAFE. Mr. George Burdick, ex-school trustee, said that he and Mr. Edward Towe were standing on the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets, about 9:30, and hearing the cheering they started to walk towards the city hall. Just as they reached it the crash came. The dust pouring out of the windows resembled smoke. Mr. Burdick says he rushed into the ruins, and found that the safe had pinned down and killed Frank Robinson, the Horton street plasterer. The big steam register was on top of George Maker. Mr. Burdick and others tugged at this and managed to remove it. Mr. Burdick's clothes and hat were saturated with blood. A BOY'S SAD DEATH. Oswald Bruce, aged 15, of the Wharncliffe road, met a sad death. He was not in the City Hall, as a policeman prevented him on account of the crowd. The lad stood in the arcade, leaning against the city engineer's office. A timber crashed through the head and killing him instantly. MR. KILGOUR'S ESCAPE. Mr. James Kilgour, of South London, the furniture dealer, was on the southern edge of the brink. He felt himself falling, but sank only about two feet. when he alighted on a beam. dust was so thick that he could not see a foot before him. Feeling his way, he crawled on hands and knees along the beam, and finally reached the floor near the east window. The dust began to settle, but he saw that fresh air was wanted, and he handed a stick to those at the window. With this they broke the glass. In the crase the diamond was gouged out of his finger ring, and is, of course, lost beyond recovery. THE LATE L. W. BURKE. The body of the late L. W. Burke, killed in the city hall accident, was shipped at an early hour this (Wednesday) morning to his sister at Stirling, Ont., where interment will take place, Messrs, W. C. Fitzgerald, chief clerk of the Canadian Order of the Woodmen of the World, had made all necessary arrangements for the funeral here but awaited instructions from Mr. Burke's relatives. The message came last night, and the remains were shipped accordingly. Mr. Burke was a member of the Woodmen of the World, and had an insurance of $3,000 in that organization, which was made in favor of his sister and niece.

SERGT. McGUIRE'S EXPERIENCE. Police Sergeant Arthur McGuire was in the hall at the time. He was guarding the southwest entrance when the

"Immediately there was a wild rush toward the door where I stood," the offi-cer told a reporter. "I saw that the people were stampeding, and shouted at the top of my voice. "For God's sake. go steady, men!' It was of little use. I tried to hold the crowd back, but they volver would be exploded. One of my arms was about the door jam, held there by the fearful crush of people, and I could not get it out for a few moments. There were five women in the hall, and they were terror-stricken. Save me, save me!' they screamed, and they all got hold of me. Happily, all got out alive.'

SAVED BY HIS CAP. Mr. J. W. Smith, of Maitland street, attributes his escape to the thickness of his fur cap, which formed a cushion for a brick which struck him square on the head and prevented serious injury. When the accident occurred he standing near the old iron safe, which toppled over almost immediate ly, missing him in the descent. His leg was jammed in among the flooring Ald.-elect Wilkey, who was one of saw the people looking down at him At the time fifteen or more were pinned under the safe, and their cries were heartrending. Nothing could be seen but their heads. Though Mr. Smith was badly hurt he rendered good service by assisting to rescue

A. G. CHISHOLM'S STORY. In company with his young son, Mr. Chisholm was standing at the east end of the speakers' platform, near the safe. When the floor gave way Mr. Chisholm clung to his boy and reached for something to stay their fall, but they were swept down to what seemed certain death. The safe was so close that until it was raised escape was cut off. The experience was a terrible one. The father sprained his shoulder, and the son, Weymiss, has a sprained ankle.

TELEGRAMS OF CONDOLENCE. The following telegrams of condolence were received today, mostly addressed to Mayor Little: From Frank W. Lilley, Buffalo, formerly of London-"My heartfelt sympathy to the sufferers in London's second awful calamity."

From Charles C. Cole, mayor, Niagara Falls, Ont.—"The town of Niagara Falls, in council assembled, tenders sincere sympathy to the city of London on the occasion of the city hall disaster Monday. Accept our condolence.' From Wingate & Johnston, London, England: "Desire to tender deep sympathy with all in terrible accident. Hope you and other friends have escaped injury.' Wingate & Johnston are a noted business firm known to many London merchants. Their cable was addressed to Robinson & Little. From Andrew Mackay, mayor, Woodstock: "The citizens of Woodstock join me in sympathy with you in the sad affliction which has befallen your city.' From Alfred F. SCHOOL BOARD CONDOLES. At the school board last night, the chairman, Mr. A. Greenlees, paid a fitting tribute to the late Ald. Turner, who had sat at the school board for several years. The following resolution was moved by Trustee Macpherson, seconded by Trustee Dr. Campbell. and carried by a standing vote: "That the board expresses its sorrow and sympathy with the citizens bereaved in the awful accident at the city hall last night, and especially with the family of the late John Turner, who was at one time a valuable member of the board, and with William Bruce, janitor of the Victoria school, who mourns the loss of a son.'

Secretary McElheran was instructed to forward copies of the resolution to both families. The board also decided to attend Ald. Turner's funeral in a LUCKY FOR MR. TOOTHE. Mr. Toothe feels sure it was the floor that went first, not the platform, as many people claim. "The first thing I remember after going down with the crowd," said Mr. Toothe," was someone calling out: 'Men, for God's sake, keep quiet.' I think that was Bob Carrothers. I lay very quiet. I thought to myself, 'Now this is going to be a horrible death.' I determined to reserve my strength for a final effort to escape, and kept my mouth shut. I did not me began kicking and struggling and plunging. It was fearful. I extricated myself, and saw, just four feet above me, the floor from which I had fallen. Then I clambered up a timber, and Galbraith, the jeweler, gave me a hand, and pulled me up. I got only a few scratches."

densely crowded gallery said he would not be surprised if something happened. "I was in the crowd between the floor which gave way and the northwest exit, and how I got out from the frantic mass is more than I can tell." Mr. Tracey was the first lessee of what is now the engineer's office in 1888 The partition which gave support where the beam cracked and sank was removed, and remained as it now is. He did not regard the place as safe, however, because his shaving-cups used to rattle whenever a dance was held in the hall.

NOTES Ald. Parnell called on Mayor-elect Wilson last night to congratulate him on his election and on his escape from the city hall horror. The inquest was not held upon the body of W. H. Dell as reported. Mr. Dell's body was taken to his home in West London yesterday, and will be buried tomorrow.

The majority of the funerals take place Thursday. It will be a long time before confidence is restored in the city hall auditorium. For mass meetings and other large gatherings a hall on the ground floor will be in demand. Chief of Police Williams says the city were trying to lift the safe. He immediately ordered them to stop, and had to rap some over the knuckles who would not let go the rope. Someone whom he could not identify knocked him down. All the wounded at the hospitals are doing well and no fatalities are feared there. TRIBUTE TO THE ADVERTISER. The London Advertiser, with its accustomed enterprise, issued a speciai edition this morning, giving full particulars of the terrible accident. It contained the account of a number of survivors, some of whom had miraculous
