ful, more gentle, and suddenly ceased. The mists began to fade away. The beavy cloud parted. A pale silver moon appeared and shed her brilliant rays over the entire room. The weary traveler sighed in contentment. What sound was that?

He started up. There was a harsh grating as of some one at the lock. He sprang from the bed, ran over to the window and hid himself in the drapings. The door opened. Outlined in the pale clear moonlight the intruder stood forth a short, thickset man, whose natarally merry, rubicand face was disforted by some malignant purpose. The traveler felt his every muscle stiffen. The man moved toward the bed. He drew the rep curtains aside. The man at the window leaned forward. The moon's rays fell full on the bed, and there, lying with a black tin box clasped in his arms, was a man fully clad in the uniform of a British officer. The sleeping man started, opened his eyes and sprang up. The thickset man forced him back.

"The box, Jasper Hamilton-the box with the jewels and gold!" But the man on the bed clung to the box, gave a violent wrench and knocked his opponent aside, sprang from the bed and faced his glaring adversary.

"The box, or you"—
The tall officer rushed forward and clutched at his antagonist's throat. The man on the other hand flung his left arm forward, there was a flash of something bright, a low, choking cry, and the soldier swayed forward, then backward and fell to the floor. "Ha, ha, Jasper Hamilton, and now pray thee give the box, good fellow! Aye, I thank thee, so courteous, so generous." And he bowed mockingly to the fallen man. The man in the window tried to cry out, but his voice refused utterance. Some gigantic monster seemed holding him in a viselike grip. The other living man gazed upon his victim complacently, stooped, drew the blade out of the bloodless wound, coolly wiped it on the military coat, paused, then quickly stooped over the corpse as if examining it, arose, moved over to the dresser and laid thereon five buttons in a pile, walked over to the side wall, ran his right hand along it, paused, pressed the forefinger, when suddenly and noiselessly a wide, dark opening was visible. He turned to the body, dragged it forward, placing the head at the opening, stepped backward, and gave a push with his foot. It was immovable. He stooped down, took it by the knees, made a violent forward movement, and it slid silently out of sight. He closed the aperture gently, ran his hand over the wall, then passed from the room. Clouds were again filling the sky, the winds began to mean and sigh, the traveler staggered forward. His breath came in gasps.

"The leather wallet, man, quick!" He started at the words. A hand was over his mouth. His eyes opened. He was in the red curtained bed, and standing over him menacingly, knife in hand, was his jolly host, his face contorted by passion.

"Make haste! The wallet!" The stranger sprang upward. The tavern keeper felt a stinging blow on the right cheek and staggered backward. The officer made a rapid back movement with the right hand and drew forth a long, thin bladed Italian

"To death, my jolly host, to death!"
The darkness obscured everything, yet the labored breathing of his antagonist reached him. "As thon wilt," muttered the man, and be advanced. There were several close encounters, a low gurgling cry and a heavy fall. "To death, my merry bost, to death!"

There was no reply. The night had become calmer. The moon pierced the clouds. It filled the low ceiled chamber. The officer knelt down by the prostrate man, put his hand in the side coat pocket and drew forth a chain on which hung five brass buttons. He removed them and replaced the chain, felt in his own breast pocket and drew forth a sixth, rose and laid them in a pile on the dresser, then moved to the side wall, ran his right hand along, pressed with the forefinger, and there appeared a wide, dark open-

He retraced his steps, dragged the body forward, placed the head at the opening, stooped, grasped it by the knees, gave a push and it silently disappeared. He closed the wall and turned to the dresser. 'When Jasper Hamilton disappeared, there remained but five buttons on the dresser. When mine host Glendening is found missing, they will have become Advertising. A good headline, if in large type and of great brevity, is really an illustration, and many advertisers prefer it to a picture, because the right kind of a headline is not misleading, and is in-stantly absorbed by the reader, while a picture, and even a good one, may il-lustrate something which the advertiser does not care to bring out prominently The public can sometimes misunder-stand a picture, but it is not likely to misunderstand a brief headline or short advertising is to use illustrations only when they illustrate and to use strong headlines with or without illustrations and to use illustrations a part of the time and large type headlines the rest of the time.—Hardware.

Trades Union Congress at Birmingham Re solves to Assist the Striking Engineers. Birmingham, England, Sept. 7 .- The Birmingham, England, Sept. 7.—The Trades Union Congress resumed its sessions to-day, with President Stevens in the chair. The latter, in his annual address, said the engineers' strike was an instance of one of the best organized and most powerful combinations in the world being in the throes of a great struggle with a powerful combination of capital. It was certain, he added, that the struggle would be predomined. of capital. It was certain, he added, that the struggle would be prolonged and that the engineers would have to appeal for help to the trades uniquists throughout the country. That help, the President continued, must be given, for under no circumstances could they allow the engineers to be defeated. [Great cheering.]

cheering.]
The delegates then unanimously and enthusiastically adopted a special resolution, pledging moral and financial aid to the striking engineers.

Mr. Benjamin Pickard, M.P., President of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, in supporting the motion, said that all trades uniquists should tender eight-hour notices and "sink or swim"

WHAT BISMARCK SAID.

ermany May Regret Baving Barasse England Too Much.

Paris, Sept. 7.—The Gaulois to-day prints an interview with Prince Bismarck, in which he is quoted as having expressed fear that the efforts made at Peterhof were so much wasted time. What was required, the at-Chancellor is said to have added, was a serious, active agreement, with a well-defined program and much clear sightedness and tenacity to achieve a result whereby the pretensions of Great Britain could be stayed.

The Prince was further quoted as remarking. 'It is absolutely certain that Germany will not succeed in attaining this end, and she might regret having harassed England too much.'

will not succeed in attaining this end, and she might regret having harassed England too much."

Prince Bismarck admitted that the time was propitious for the snatching of Egypt and the Suez Canal from England, but said he did not believe that Frenchmen have any passionate interest in that question, adding: "Perhaps they are right to wait for us Germans to become still more deeply involved in our foreign policy, for above have neither leadership nor principles—nothing whatever. Everyone is groping about and the treasures of influence I labored to accumulate are being profitiessly squandered."

The Soleil, in an important article, draws a contrast between the Dreibund and the Busso-French alliance. Germany and Austria, the paper says, have no claim to each other's aid unless attacked simultaneously by two adversaries, while the Russo-French alliance imposes the obligation to assist if either is attacked by a single enemy.

The implication of this contrast is that in the event of the outbreak of war hestilities would inevitably become universal, because under the present circumstances a war between France and Germany would be bound to bring Russia into the field, thus providing a basis for Austria and Italy to Join her in the conflict under the provisions of the Dreibund.

According to another statement Russia enly agreed to the treaty upon condition that France should abandon all idea of, a

A DOUBLE CURE. Mrs. Jas. E. Elwood, St. Thomas, Ont., says:—"My husband and myself have taken Doan's Kidney Pills. We used them for kidney and back trouble, for which we had spent a good deal of money without getting relief. Doan's Pills cured us both in a remarkably short time. I believe they will cure even after all other medicines fall."

war of revenge upon Germany for the parpose of recovering Alsace and Lorraine. This is borne out by the statement of The Buda Pest Nemzit, the organ of the Hungarian Foreign Office, that Emperor William, during his visit to St. Petersburg, obtained a confidential assurance, which he imparted to Austria and Italy, that the proposed Franco-Russian treaty was purely defensive and devoid of hostility towards any power whatsoever.

Belgium Will be the Fighting Ground.
Berlin, Sept. 7.—The Brussels correspondent of The Tagebiatr announces that the Governments of Belgium and Holland are about to conclude a defensive treaty. Fear is expressed, the correspondent says, that Belgium will be the seat of the next war between France and Germany.

How to Paralyze England. London, Sept. 7.—The corresponden of The Times at Paris says: "A diplo of the times at Paris says: "A depre-matist of my acquaintance expressed the opinion that the chief topic discussed by President Faure and the Czar dur-ing the former's visit to Russia was the best means for paralyzing England's action should she join the Dreibund against them." against them.

labby Intimates That Lieut, Von Habnk Hit the Emperor and Then Snielded. London, Sept. 7 .- Mr. Henry Labouchere, in Truth, to-day, once more pul lishes the intimation that Lieut, Von Hahnke's death was, a sequel to the black eye which Emperor William received at about that time. According to one story, the lieutenant, stung by the Emperor's sharp words, resented them to the extent of blacking His Majesty's eye and then took his own Majesty's eye and then took his own life.

Truth, in to-day's comments on the affair, says: "We have received a letter saying that on the day following Von Hahnke's death, a dummy figure of the same size and weight was tossed into the torrent in order to test its effect. When the dummy was drawn in it was found to be torn to pieces, and everybody agrees that Von Hahnke's body must have met a similar fate. Yet, since the appearance of Truth's remarks, it is announced from Berlin that the body has been recovered after being six weeks in the raging torrent, and that it will the raging torrent, and that it wil be brought home for burial.

Simla, Sept. 7.—The frontier reports are more favorable. The spies say the Orakzais appear to be disheartened.

The British political officer at Malakand reports the Swatis to be submitting and to be surrendering more guns and swords, which, with the fines imposed, 'completes the Government's demands and terms for the punishment of the Swati tribes.

PETERSEN'S REFLY TO TORRANCE.

Fast Line Contractor Says All Arrangements are Progressing.

London, Sept. 7.—Mr. Petersen emphatically denies the statement in which John Torrance of the Dominion Line is quoted as saying that Petersen, Take & Company's fast Canadian steamship line project is dead, owing to the fact that the company has been mable to that the company has been unable to finance it. Mr. Petersen assured the Associated Press that the organization necessary to carry out the new steamship service is progressing rapidly. WITH GRACIE.

As sad I was as any. With all a lover's pain, Till I watched that day with Gracie-With Gracie in the rain! Past fresh'ning fields of clover And sweet with ripening grain, And blossoms blowing over, With Gracie in the rain!

The silken shade above her,
The violets at her feet;
The rain-drops seemed to love her,
And fell in music sweet. And oh, the south wind blowing In many a glad refrain .
When love and I were going
With Gracie in the rain.

Each breeze that rippled past her Stole kisses on the way; The rain fell never faster Than beat my heart that day! And oh, the fields of clover, And oh, the golden grain, love came home, the rover,

For love came none,
With Gracie in the rain,

Blindfolded and alone I stand With unknown thresholds on each Afraid to fear, afraid to hope.
Yet this one thing I learn to know Each day more surely as I go; That doors are opened, ways are made Burdens are lifted, or are laid By some great law, unseen and still, Unfathomed purpose to fulfil. Not as I will.
