Paris. Oct. 29.—At the opening of the court of cassation to-day, M. Mornard tesumed his argument on behalf of the Dreyfus family, insisting that the bordeau was not the handwriting of Dreyfus, or an imitation by him of the writing of Major Esterhazy. The latter hypothesis, counsel continued, was absolutely improbable. It it was an imitation the author of it must be a party. If it was no imitation the author of the bordeau, he asserted, can only be Major Esterhuzy himself. Continuing, M. Mornard pointed out the honor of the army was not involved in the do ings of the court martial as in other courts, without their honor suffering.

After M. Mornard had closed his After M. Mornard had closed his argument the court retired to deliberate. Paris, Oct. 29.—The court of cassation has decided to grant a revision of the Dreyfus case, and will institute a supplementary inquiry. The court, how-ever, has declined to order the release
