DIVING AT GOVERNMENT PIER. There was a considerable interest manifested among the spectators on the Government pier this morning, the occasion being the descent of diver Ned Doherty to recover a rail which fell from the steamer Nemes, now discharging cargo. During the morning the rail fell from the sling and as it was feared the vessel might have a hole punched in her bottom by coming in contact with the end of the rail, the services of the diver were requisitioned. At half-past eleven everything was in readiness, the diver having his suit adjusted and the four assistants in their places, two at the pumps and the other two at the rope and hose. After being under water about a quarter of an hour, Mr. Doherty came up, having located the rail and secured a chain about the centre of it. After being brought above the surface of the water, additional ropes were attached to the rail, when it was hoisted and placed on the car.

ONE SHIRT AND THREE COLLARS

Joe A. Morgan Arrested on Suspicion of Misappropriation Another Man's Laundry.

In the police court this morning Joseph A. Morgan, a clerk in the Park hotel, appeared to answer the charge of stealing a shirt and several collars. Morgan was arrested early this morning.

Mr. Demery said that a parcel of laundry had been sent to the hotel for a guest who was away. He put it in his desk and when the parcel was required for it could not be found. Morgan is on duty at night and was arrested on suspicion.

Deputy Jenkins told of finding several of the missing collars in Morgan's room.

The prisoner admitted that he had found the collars and said that he had found them in a box under the counter, where they were with a lot of rubbish. He had sent them to the laundry several times and had no idea that they were of value to any one. He denied taking the shirt. He was remanded.

Allan Whipple was fined eight dollars for being drunk and Fred Campbell and Charles Lenders forfeited like amounts for the same offence.

TRINITY HAS A KICK. And now Trinity church has a kick. The members of this congregation are not objecting to the street cars which pass the back door, nor do they complain of the Orange street dumps, but they strongly object to the abattoir project. The rector, church wardens and vestry of Trinity have sent to the common council a memorial praying that the council do not permit the acquisition of a site for, or the construction of a slaughter house near the Church of England burying ground. It is claimed that such an establishment would be objectionable and offensive to the memorialists and to the public generally. It is suggested that other sites for the abattoir are available.

REV. LINDSAY PARKER.

Preached Last Sunday Evening in the Rothersey Episcopal Church

Rev. Lindsay Parker, of Brooklyn, occupied the pulpit in the Rothersey Episcopal church last evening, and before a large congregation spoke on "Sin, Righteousness and Judgment," taking his text from John 14, 7-11.

Mr. Parker said that there was something remarkable in the way Christ spoke of going away. From His words it was shown that His leaving was a necessity, but the same time he assured His disciples that they would not be left comfortless. His bodily presence might be withdrawn, but His spiritual influence will always remain, and this will afford the same strength to His followers as His bodily presence did to those with whom he came in contact. He brought the disciples face to face with the realities of life and in the same way His influence now has the effect of enabling men to see their true selves, see their souls as they would appear before the judgment of God. There is no need of waiting for a great white throne, for the court, or for a great white throne, for the court of every man when he truly realizes his condition. The hope for redemption, at these times seems small, but above the sin righteousness can be seen shining out in the beauty and whiteness of Christ. He has enabled man to understand what he really is, and those who have seen themselves are stunned by the realization. Sin is a disregard of God's will and a revolt against His authority. But Christ is personified hope. He has enabled man to see that there is no one ever cheered and heartened before. He has assured His people that the judgment which awes them now may be robbed of all its terrors. "Come ye blessed of my Father." There is no need to dread the old doctrine of election, for the elect of God are simply "those who will" and Christ has declared the possibility of righteousness to all. It seems very easy to attain righteousness, but without the aid of Christ it would be a hopeless task. He is the strengthener of man. His love and power are needed to save from despair and back up man's puny efforts. About a year ago he was treated back sin. But Christ must be taken into the life. It is not enough for a man to say that he believes the story of Christ. His heart must open and the Saviour be fully received into it. When this is done, his victory is won. His strength never fails, he never fails. At the close of the service Miss Kee of Boston sang very acceptably Abide With Me.

HAVE NOT HEARD FROM THEIR SON. Mr. G. A. McLeod, Receives Sir Son's Medal and Thinks the Boy is Coming Home.

A medal came this morning to the home of G. A. McLeod, father of John McLeod, who went to South Africa in 1901 with the S. A. C. For some time John McLeod was at Blomfontein, and while there wrote regularly to his parents. About a year ago he was transferred to Forest Smith, and corresponded frequently till March, since which month no word has been received from him directly, although Mrs. McLeod heard that she was from another soldier that her son was at Forest Smith in April.

In his last letter, written at that place, John told his mother not to come to the address again, as he expected to return home shortly. He has not arrived yet, though his parents believe that he is now on the way, for if he intended to remain in South Africa, he would have directed that his imperial service medals be sent there, instead of to his own address, at 26 Castle street. His folks think it strange that he has not written, but have no fear of his safety.

PROBATE COURT. A Rather Interesting Judgment Delivered Today.

In the probate court this morning the will of Margaret Colman was probated and letters testamentary were issued to John Welsh, the executor named therein. The estate is valued at $1,390 personal property, and of that $100 is given to the Rev. Mr. Bishop of St. Patrick's Industrial school, $100 to Mother Urban for the Mater Misericordiae home, and the rest to relatives of the deceased. John L. Carleton, proctor.

John Welsh delivered in the marriage of Mrs. McCord, and her sons, the heirs of her husband. During her husband's lifetime Mrs. McCord had saved $600 out of the money given her to write the running of the house. The heirs claimed the money, which is now in the Savings Bank. Judge Trueman ruled that the money was the separate property of Mrs. McCord. J. DeLo, solicitor for Mrs. McCord, administrator, and Hon. H. A. McKeown, proctor for heirs.

WEDS BRIDE WHO WON CAMPAIGN FOR HIM. Assemblyman Eugene J. McCarthy Marries Miss Veronica Goodwine in Harlem Church.

Assemblyman Eugene J. McCarthy was married last night in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, 125th street and Columbus avenue, to Miss Veronica M. Goodwine, by the pastor, the Rev. Gerard Huntman.

Mr. McCarthy was twenty-three years-old when he was elected to the assembly last fall from the Twenty-third district. His bride was an important factor in his election. She accompanied him on his speech-making trips through the district and made a personal canvass for him among her friends. Mr. McCarthy won by a large majority over his opponent, the candidate for the office in the district. Shortly afterward he asked his "campaign girl" as he called her, to be his wife.

THE BLOOMER GIRLS.

(Boston Post.) Which was it, Miss Maud Nelson or "Master Johnny Somebody Else?"

People out at the Dorchester baseball field took two hours yesterday to decide whether the little pitcher of the Bloomer Girls' baseball club, a traveling organization, was a boy or a girl. And no decision was reached.

But whatever the sex of the box arter, "the best little ball player that ever stepped on a Boston field," was the verdict of all.

If a girl, then Miss Maud Nelson is a wonderful young woman. As a pitcher she would be an honor to any amateur team in the country.

She pitched five innings against the strong Lovells of Dorchester, and allowed but two hits, while five were struck out.

Remarkable speed, fine command and sharp curves combined with great headwork, did this slip of a girl show.

Her fielding was magnificent. She stopped with one hand a shrieking liner that many a league pitcher would have dodged, and a few minutes later scooped in a scorching liner with one hand in time to make a double play.

When she retired from the pitcher's box short field it was to shine in the fielding line. Once she ran out to centre, and when the blonde centrefielder had fallen all over the ball, fielded it home on a line, catching the runner at base by a neck.

The very next inning she completed a play that the fastest major league often misses. With a man on first and one on third the first base runner started to go down to second. The youth-ful ball down to second. The youth-ful wonder let it back like a rifle shot, nabbing the runner just as he led in. The ball went on a line with the speed of a bullet.

At the bat the young woman made a three-bagger, a two-bagger and two singles. Her three-bagger was the longest hit of the game, and made against as good an amateur pitcher as there is around Boston, Barnstead of the Dorchester High school.

The Lovells won, six runs to five, but the game was a warm one. The young women had three men to assist them. All rattling good ball players.

The first baseman of the Bloomer Girls, Miss LeClair, played a star game. She handled hot balls with ease and batted well.

The Bloomer centre fielder could not field well, but she had an arm of iron and her throwing was a treat.

Aside from Miss Nelson, the girls were not very hefty at the bat, but the men, who played third base, alternate pitcher, short and catcher, were up to the standard.

Most of the girls were small and wiry, the star being a tiny bit of humanity weighing about 90 pounds with dark brown hair.

LORD MILNER DEFENDED. Colonial Secretary Warmly Defends the Administration in South Africa.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—In the house of commons yesterday, during the discussion of the Colonial Office vote, replying to a bitter attack on the government's policy and Lord Milner's administration in South Africa by Mr. Markham, liberal, in the course of which he charged that affairs were growing worse, the colonial secretary Chamberlain lengthily defended the administration of South Africa. He said the greatest difficulty was not the reconciliation of the Boers and Britons, but the conciliation of the Boers with the British. The secretary then called attention to the fact that the Boers were making every effort to develop the country, and were forming local agricultural associations, of which the chairman, in many cases, were former leaders of the Boer forces. Mr. Chamberlain admitted that much had to be done, and said that if it was found that the work of pacification was prevented by irreconcilables, the government would not hesitate to use its strong power to deport the mischief-makers.

GONE NUTTY. That Russian Prince Who Was So Very Original.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Times this morning prints a Vienna dispatch saying that the Emperor of Russia received with benevolence from the Croats in the United States a petition describing the condition of Croatia in the Balkan territory.

MEXICAN POWER MERGER. CITY OF MEXICO, Mexico, via Galveston, Texas, July 29.—The Mexican Light and Power Company, recently organized by Canadian financiers, is conducting negotiations with the Siemens & Halske Company, which may ultimately result in the purchase of the property of the latter company. The Canadian company is constructing a $5,000,000 generating and transmission plant, whereby it will be able to return to account the great energy of the Necaxa Falls, in the state of Puebla, and distribute the same in this city for lighting and power purposes.

According to General Manager Neugebauer, of the Siemens & Halske Company, reports of the sale of the property are premature.

DROWNED DROWNING HIS DOG. WATERVILLE, Aug. 2.—The body of Edward Haggard, married farmer, 25 years old, who was drowned in the Sebasticook river Thursday night, while drowning his St. Bernard dog, was found early Friday close beside that of the dog. Haggard had noticed rabid signs in the animal, which was a valuable one, and decided to drown him. The dog struggled to escape and in the fight both were drowned.

There was a meeting of the council of the Board of Trade this morning. No important business was transacted.
