

ANOTHER WOMAN JOINS THE ARMY

Of Western Women Who Have Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

After three years of suffering Madame Dufault of St. Boniface is telling her Neighbors of Her Wonderful Cure.

St. Boniface, Man. (Special)—Cured of a complication of diseases, each a direct result of disordered kidneys, Madame Oct. Dufault, of 84 Victoria street, this city, has joined the grand army of the women of the West who are telling their neighbors that Dodd's Kidney Pills are suffering women's best friend.

"I suffered for three years," Madame Dufault states: "and I may say I had pains all over my body."

"I had sciatica, neuralgia and diabetes. My back ached, and I had pains in my head. I was nervous and tired all the time; there were dark circles around my eyes, and they were puffed and swollen. Heart fluttering added to my fears."

"But when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills I soon began to get better. I took thirteen boxes in all, but now I am a well woman again. I think Dodd's Kidney Pills are a grand remedy."

in America." And Charles McCarthy knows.

The authority behind the investigation was the Wisconsin State Board of Public Affairs, of which Governor Francis E. McGovern is chairman. This board believes in thorough, scientific, first-hand investigations; after which it insists upon a practical application of the conclusions reached. In the matter of co-operation the board was forehanded; for a recommendation was made to the University of Wisconsin looking to the establishment of a professorship, which recommendation has been adopted and a professor appointed. He will teach the history of co-operation, co-operative credit, marketing of produce and markets in general, and co-operative stores. Eventually, no doubt, this professor will become also the "director of co-operation" of the state—this being in line with the principal recommendation of the report. Probably the director will devote the greater part of his time to educational work—field work and special instruction in the university. He will not only teach the principles of marketing and co-operative methods, but he will be expected to devise some central exchange through which co-operative buyers can reach co-operative sellers and co-operative producers. The Wisconsin Board of Public Affairs will say to the director of co-operation:

"Your genius and your energies must be directed to the problem of reducing useless waste and thereby reducing the cost of living, so that the ideal of that great champion of co-operation, Sir

Present-Day Co-operation will be the next subdivision, in which will be found a discussion of co-operative breeding, cow-testing associations, the dairy industry, the livestock shippers' association, the fruit-growers' association, co-operative warehouses, the vegetable industry, co-operative elevators, co-operative marketing of eggs and mutual telephone companies. Lessons and Prospects will furnish a subject for another important chapter; and the report will conclude with The Practical Application of Co-operation in Wisconsin.

Within the limits of this review The Observer can indicate but a few features of this comprehensive investigation. Denmark and Ireland, Mr. Sinclair tells us, "resorted to co-operation because of their dire poverty. The former is now one of the most prosperous countries in Europe; the latter is growing in prosperity as the co-operative spirit develops." Denmark was chosen by Mr. Sinclair as an object lesson because of the apt comparisons possible. The little country has an area of about 10,000,000 acres—or approximately the size of Wisconsin's undeveloped area! Formerly Denmark was to a large extent a bleak waste of sand dunes; now it is essentially an agricultural country. Every year butter, eggs and meats to the value of $90,000,000 are exported by Danish farmers. And what is particularly remarkable, out of every 100 families, 89 own their own farms and homes! This, explains Mr. Sinclair, is because "land holdings can be easily acquired."

THE FOOTHILLS

Down at their feet lie the round, curdled tops of the liveoaks,
Grasses and flowers and wheat, all the glad life that thrills
In joyous succession each year through the heart of the valley—
Dear children forever denied to the sad, barren hills.

Motionless lie they, save for the flight of a shadow,
Shaped by a cloud drifting silently over their slopes;
Eternally changeless, save for the flame of the sunset;
Ah, how they mock me, surging with passionate hopes!

I am longing for life, for the world. They hold me in bondage,
These bleak, barren hills, and I struggle and cry to be free.
In my heart is let loose all the fierceness of youth and its power;
What is their grandeur, their desolate beauty, to me?

I shall scale them and plunge in the world. Yet I know, in its glories,
An hour will come when I curse it and cry for release;
And my heart will turn back to the hills with an infinite longing.
It will pant for their cool, it will break for their passionless peace.

Horace Plunkett, "Better farming, better business and better living," may become a reality in our state.

The investigation in co-operation was conducted by Mr. John F. Sinclair, of the Legislative Reference Library, who, at his own expense, visited Europe and there gathered the basic principles for his admirable analysis of the subject. In his forthcoming report he will say that his purpose is "to show the farmers of Wisconsin the possibilities that exist and the dangers to be guarded against in agricultural co-operation."

From Poverty to Prosperity

Co-operation he defines as "merely a phase of economic and social development." And he explains: "As in every other evolutionary process perfection is reached only after a series of trials where the best is retained and the worthless cast off. If we are keen enough to detect the fundamental principles and wise enough to utilize them when found, regardless of their source, the success of co-operation is assured." He gives this warning at the outset: "The movement will not develop properly without conscious effort of the most exacting character on the part of the farmers. Nor will an enterprise once established on the co-operative plan run along automatically without the constant vigilance of the people concerned."

Mr. Sinclair's report will be subdivided somewhat along these lines: First, he will discuss co-operation abroad—specifically, in Denmark and Ireland; second, he will give the early history of so-called co-operation in Wisconsin.

mark is only about thirty years old. In 1882 the first co-operative creamery was established at Olgod, West Jutland. According to the statistics of 1908, there were 1100 co-operative creameries in successful operation, handling practically all of the milk supply of Denmark. Mr. Sinclair explains how these co-operative enterprises are organized.

Each member enters into an agreement to supply the entire product of his herd to the co-operative society for a fixed period—usually from ten to fifteen years. All of the capital for the undertaking is provided by raising a loan on an unlimited liability. As a rule there is no reserve fund, but the loan is paid off out of net profits during the period for which all contracts are drawn. The general policy of the society is determined at regular meetings, at which each member has one vote, and questions of administration are settled by an executive committee elected at these meetings. The creamery is managed by a competent butter-maker.

Each member is paid at stated intervals for the butter fat he has furnished during the preceding period. He receives for his product not the market price at the time of payment, but the lowest price which has prevailed during that period. Thus a profit accumulates, which is divided among the members at the end of the year in proportion to the amount of butter fat furnished by each farmer. The skim milk returned to members is charged against them at a fixed price, sufficient to cover all working expenses. And mark these facts:

Suffered With Kidney Trouble For Ten Years.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

Miss Mary Daley, Pennfield Ridge, N.B., writes:—"I now take great pleasure in expressing myself for the benefit I have obtained from your wonderful medicine, Doan's Kidney Pills. Having been a sufferer with kidney trouble for the last ten years, and having spent hundreds of dollars in the so-called 'Quack' cures, from which I derived no benefit whatever, and after having been advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I at once purchased a box, and from the first obtained relief, and after having taken five boxes am now completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
