was done each should take half." This was fourteen days before the written agreement was drawn up. The written agreement was drawn on the 23rd by Frank Sullivan, witness said, in Capt. Sullivan's room, in the presence of himself and Capt. Sullivan, at the latter's suggestion.

Q—And according to your story he gave you an agreement and signed it that he would get you $5,000 and get your protest dropped, and get you the patronage for the riding? A—Yes, sir.

Q—And the $5,000 of that had to be paid within between what dates? A—I think it was the third and fifth of September, a short time away.

Q—And the balance of the $2,000 was to be paid when? A—After the session.

Q—Who suggested the Frank Sullivan agreement? A—The one he signed?

Q—Yes? A—Possibly I suggested it.

Q—Why did you suggest the agreement for Frank to sign? A—Because they were getting an agreement for me to sign.

Q—And you wanted that as evidence? A—Yes, I wanted something.

Q—Then how many days afterwards did you destroy that agreement? A—I couldn't tell you exactly. Give me within a reasonable time. Was it within a week? A—I think it was within a week.

Q—Where were the agreements destroyed? A—They were destroyed in the Walker House.

Q—And you each produced your agreement, that is, Frank held your agreement, and you held Frank's agreement? A—Yes.

Q—What was said, please? A—I cannot tell you exactly; the idea was that they did not have any further use for the document and I would have to sign another agreement when I got the money from the Government.

Q—That is, they did not have any further use for the documents; they had seen the man and convinced him you understood? A—Seen some member of the Cabinet.

Q—At that moment you held the only incriminating evidence against Frank Sullivan that had been so far in existence? A—Yes, sir.

Q—And the only document in which money was ever mentioned as a lump sum? A—Yes, sir.

Q—It was the best evidence that you had up to that time. It was the best evidence you had during the whole of this scheme? A—Yes.

Q—And you destroyed it before you see a dollar of money? Is that so? A—That is right. You could not have got the money or anything else if you did not have the confidence of the Sullivan.

Q—And you a detective on the path of the Government? A—Yes.

Q—Had an incriminating document in your possession, the only document in the whole proceedings in which money is mentioned, in which the details are set out, and you come here and tell us the story that you deliberately destroyed that document? A—Simply because I wanted their confidence.

Q—You had what was better than the payment of money? You had the evidence of crime in writing and signed by Frank Sullivan? A—I had not a single thing from the Cabinet.

Q—Did anybody make a copy of it for you, or did anybody see it except yourself? A—Not that I know of. I expected I would have had it for a longer period of time until after the money was paid and the deal carried out.

Q—I would like to ask you about the Sullivan.

Q—That alteration was not written.

Q—I know that. Now, at Gore Bay you undertook to state, without reference to Frank Sullivan at all, what it was that brought the parcel, didn't you? A—As far as I knew I thought it was Myers.

Q—Frank and I went down to the smoking-room, and waited a short time, and Mr. Myers, acting secretary for Mr. Stratton, walked into the smoking-room and laid the same envelope parcel on the table? A—That is the man I thought it was.

Q—That is the man you stated it the second time, when you met Mr. Stratton in his office. After you had got through talking he took something out of his pocket, you say? A—I won't swear that it was the second time, but on that day he took something out of his pocket. I think it was the second time.

Q—And what was it? A—An envelope.

Q—What kind of an envelope? A—It was about ten inches long.

Q—And the color? A—I think it was white.

Q—He told you what? A—He told me that everything was arranged and we were to go down to the smoking-room.

Q—Then, according to that story, the "everything arranged" was the money? A—Yes.

Q—And you knew that was the money? A—I thought it was.

Q—And that was the parcel which was to be left in the smoking-room? A—I understood that.

Q—And you were present at the time? A—I think Frank Sullivan; he was in and out of the room. I do not know whether he was standing there when he said that.

Just Before Bribe was Paid.

Q—You do not recall? A—I am not sure.

Q—You were then on the eve of the actual bribery, according to your story? A—Yes.

Q—And the immediate moment of it? A—Yes.

Q—And you cannot recollect who was in the room at the time that Stratton took it out of his pocket and laid it on the table? A—To the best of my knowledge Sullivan was in the room at the time; he may have stepped out of the room at the time.

Q—Was Frank Sullivan in the room at the time that Stratton said to have taken this package out of his pocket? A—I do not know, but I believe he was possibly in the room or in the corridors.

Q—He was possibly anywhere; you cannot say as a fact whether he was in the room? A—I cannot say; I was looking at Mr. Stratton at the time.

Q—You cannot swear he was in the room? A—He was very close.

Q—You would not swear positively? A—I think he was, likely.

Q—That is only guesswork. Mr. Stratton took the envelope out of what pocket? A—Inside vest pocket.

Q—Did he buttoned or unbuttoned at the time he started to take it out? A—I do not remember.

Q—What was said immediately before he took it out of his pocket? A—He said something about sorry to have kept me, that everything was right this time.

Q—That was all he said? A—Practically all.

Q—Did you say anything to him? A—I might have said something to him.

Q—Do you recollect saying anything to him? A—I do not remember.

Q—Did you stand up or sitting down at the time? A—Standing up.

Q—And you were standing up? A—Yes.

Q—Then you had to come along the corridor opposite Stratton's room to the main corridor? A—There isn't any corridor along opposite Stratton's room; there is only a little ante-chamber between the two rooms.

Q—Did you go direct from Stratton's room to the smoking-room? A—Went through the hall.

Q—Without turning? A—Not without turning.

Q—Didn't you come out into a corridor from Stratton's room, walk down that and turn to the right? A—Yes.

Q—You had to go from the east end to nearly the west end to get to the smoking-room? A—They are quite apart.

Q—You went in and waited for somebody to come? A—Yes.

Q—Who came? A—I couldn't tell you exactly. I could tell you what Frank Sullivan said.

Q—Who came that? A—Frank Sullivan told me that Mr. Myers handled the parcel.

The Chancellor—It is not Mr. Sullivan's recollection; it is your recollection that Mr. Johnston is asking for.

My Lord, I couldn't swear who brought the parcel into the room.

Mr. Johnston—Q—Who did you see in the smoking-room? A—I didn't see the man distinctly enough to be able to swear to it, at all.

The Envelope was Laid Down.

Q—Did you see a man come in there? A—I did.

Q—You were standing looking at him when he came in? A—No, sir. I saw him when he was going out, after he laid the parcel down. He came in and laid the parcel down on the table and I just looked back and saw the man going out.

Q—Where were you looking at this time? A—Looking out of the window.

Q—Then you were looking out of the window expecting a man to deliver a parcel? A—Yes.

Q—You were looking for evidence against the Government? A—The position I was in was such I could not see what man came in.

Q—You were looking for evidence against the Government, were you not? A—It didn't matter to me who carried the parcel.

Q—You were looking for evidence against the Government, were you not? A—Yes, you can call it that if you like.

Q—Page seven here is what you say was written up at Gore Bay—page six and page five? Is that right? A—I expect they were.

Q—You expect page seven was written at Gore Bay? A—Yes.

Q—The envelope was written before the Crossin piano factory deal at all, a week or ten days, or perhaps two weeks, before, according to your story yesterday? A—That alteration was not written.

Q—I know that. Now, at Gore Bay you undertook to state, without reference to Frank Sullivan at all, what it was that brought the parcel, didn't you? A—As far as I knew I thought it was Myers.

Q—Frank and I went down to the smoking-room, and waited a short time, and Mr. Myers, acting secretary for Mr. Stratton, walked into the smoking-room and laid the same envelope parcel on the table? A—That is the man I thought it was.

Q—That is the man you stated it was? A—I thought it was. That is altered since that statement was made. That is just what Frank Sullivan told me in the Crossin piano factory.

The Chancellor—What we have given us in the paper seems to be different from what you were reading, Mr. Johnston?

Mr. Johnston—Before Sullivan told him anything this which I have read is what he wrote.

The Chancellor—Is that altered there?

Mr. Johnston—Yes.

Believed Sullivan's Word.

Q—Did you when you made the statement in the House as altered believe that it was Chase who left the parcel on the table? A—I believe that; Frank Sullivan told me so, and I believe in Sullivan.

Q—Did you believe Chase was the man who left the parcel on the table, when you made the statement in the House, is my question? A—I am telling you I did, to the best of my knowledge; I had that knowledge from Frank Sullivan.

Q—Then according to that you didn't know who it was that left the parcel, although you had stated in your original statement that Myers was the man? A—I am telling you I couldn't state who was the man.

Q—Why did you state that? A—Simply because I thought that was the man.

Effort to Connect Stratton.

Q—You were putting it as a fact? A—No.

Q—Listen: "Mr. Myers, acting Secretary for Mr. Stratton, walked into the smoking-room and left the parcel there." A—That is what I believe.

Q—You were believing that to connect Stratton with the payment? A—That was the knowledge I had at that time.

Q—You were believing that to connect Stratton with the payment? A—Sullivan told me it was Chase; that made a difference. I knew that somebody brought the parcel.

Q—You were believing that? A—To the best of my knowledge then, Mr. Myers was the man that brought the parcel. That was my impression at that time. I don't know that he didn't bring the parcel. I only altered it because Frank Sullivan said so.

Q—Will you listen to my question? A—I am listening.

Q—You believed Myers was the man who brought the parcel to the smoking-room so that you would thereby connect Stratton with the deal? A—Yes, sir, I thought it was.

Mr. Myers Stand Up.

Q—Now, you knew Mr. Myers very well to see him? Mr. Myers is a tall, slight young man? A—Yes.

Mr. Johnston—Mr. Myers, will you please stand up. (Mr. Myers stood up.)

Q—This is the man that you speak of? A—That is Mr. Myers.

Q—It was in the daytime, was it? A—Yes.

Q—Broad daylight? A—Yes.

Q—How many windows in the smoking-room, two or three or four? A—Not many; three or four.

Q—Now you say Sullivan and you were looking out of the window when the door opened? A—Yes.

Q—Go out of the door, back again? A—Yes.

Q—Both talking? A—I expect we were talking.

Q—Did Sullivan look around when you looked around? A—The position Sullivan was in he could see the door easier than I could.

Q—Did he look around when you looked around? A—Didn't have to look around; he was turning with his face more to the door than I was. If you will let me explain I will put you right on it. (Witness makes diagram showing position of himself and Sullivan in the room.) I won't say that is exactly the position.

The Chancellor—The man came in and put the parcel on that table and went out? Is that what occurred? A—Yes, sir, and went out.

Q—Now whereabouts did he put it on the table, according to your theory? A—Well, I couldn't tell you. Somewhere about here. I don't guarantee that to be correct. That is approximately something like the shape of the place.

Q—Then, having got the money and divided it up, as you have told my learned friend, what did you do? A—Well, I went out to College street.

Q—Did Frank go with you? A—I don't think he went with me. I will say that he did not go with me from the building.

Q—Where did you go from the building? A—Down to the hotel, I presume, and had my dinner.

Mr. Johnston—Is Mr. Chase here?

Mr. Charles H. Chase came forward and stood near the witness box. Mr. Elgin C. Myers was also asked to stand up.

Mr. Johnston—Which of these two gentlemen did you see in the smoking-room? A—I do not recognize either of the men.

Q—You do not recognize this gentleman, Mr. Chase, at all? A—I do not know him at all.

Q—I do not mean Mr. Chase; do you know him as a man? A—I may have seen him before.

Q—Never saw him before the 10th of September? A—I may have seen him.

Q—Did you have to pass Chase's position at the head of the stairs in order to get to Stratton's room? A—Well, I might pass there without looking at Chase.

The Chancellor—You cannot tell whether either of these two men brought that parcel in? It may have been some other man? A—I simply say Sullivan told me it was Chase. My recollection is that it was Mr. Myers. These men themselves know which brought it in.

Mr. Johnston—They say it is false, if you want to know what they say.

The Chancellor—You were asked about a certain date and you said it was about the 25th or 26th of August? A—I could tell you if I had my book. I had a written memorandum book, in which I put down the amounts I paid out each day. It would tell me if I was in a certain place at a certain day.

Q—When I asked if you had a diary, that is what I meant. Where is that book? A—I have it here, sir.

It being 4 o'clock the court adjourned.

NECKWEAR - NECKWEAR

We want everybody to know that we pay as much attention to the selection and buying of Neckwear as to any other stock, perhaps a little more, as there is scarcely a week goes by that some novelty or new silk is not added to our ever up to date assortment. Just now the Roxbury Scarf, the Midget Knot and a new French Derby are having their innings. Have you seen them? They are here in all the new silks, the price is 50 cents.

Then there are some smart new things at 25 cents, which we would ask you to glance at in our north window, as you are passing. They are worth a look.

AN INHUMAN FATHER.

Dashed His Child's Brains Out on a Stove.

New York, April 15.—In a frenzy of rage last night, Charles Joergel, using his baby daughter as a human club, crushed her tiny skull like an eggshell.

Joergel has been living in Williamsburg, with his wife and their one child. They quarrelled on Sunday over a trivial matter, and there had been no reconciliation when Joergel went to his business yesterday. During his absence Mrs. Joergel took her child and her personal effects to the home of her sister-in-law. Returning home, Joergel found his place dark and deserted. Wild with rage, he rushed through the neighborhood, seeking the woman who had abandoned him. Late at night he came upon her. She was playing on the dining-room floor with little Margaret, their three-year-old daughter. Joergel asked but a single question. Confronting the frightened woman, he cried:—

"Will you return to your home?" For an instant she hesitated. Then, forcing down her fears, she answered:—"No, not until you mend your ways. I will no longer submit to abuse from you."

Without another word Joergel stooped suddenly and caught his little daughter by the ankles. An instant later he whirled her high above his head and ran from the dining-room into the kitchen. Mrs. Joergel darted after him, but she was too late. Like a flash he turned and kicked her. She fell helpless on the floor, while Joergel swung the shrieking child and brought its head down with crushing force on the kitchen range.

Tossing the body aside, he ran from the house. Within an hour the police had Joergel in custody.
