

Aids and Hindrances,.....	H. C. Creed.
Past not Lost,.....	A. Minard.
Spirit of the Scholar,.....	T. Blackadar.
The Exhibition,.....	S. Kempton.
Loyalty,.....	J. Murray.
Conflict between Right and Wrong,.....	J. H. Langille.
Imagination,.....	C. T. Andrews.
Discontent with the present,.....	S. Fisk.
Determination of purpose,.....	S. D. Shaw.
Power of the Press,.....	T. Corning.
The Spirit of the Teacher,.....	E. Archibald.
Light of other days (a poem),.....	W. Boggs.
Pre-Adamite World,.....	S. McVane, (excused on account of illness).
Modesty,.....	D. A. Steele.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

In the Theological Department, the Lectures on Baptism, commenced last year, were continued through the year, on Saturday mornings, and brought to a conclusion. After an exposition of the teachings of the New Testament on that subject, the history of baptism was traced downwards, with a view to shew when—and how—and for what reasons, infants were substituted for believers, and pouring or sprinkling for immersion. All the ministerial candidates in the Institutions were admitted to those Lectures.

Messrs. S. B. Kempton and J. Melbourne Parker, Graduates of last year, returned to the College, to pursue theological studies. Their attention was chiefly given to the acquisition of the Hebrew language. They studied the Grammar, and read selections from the Psalms, the Pentateuch, the prophecy of Isaiah, and the minor prophets, comprising thirty chapters of the original, comparing the whole with the Septuagint and the Vulgate. Rev. E. O. Read, of Gaspereaux, united with these gentlemen in pursuing the above studies. Exegetical Exercises in the New Testament, an examination of the writings of the Apostolic Fathers in the originals, and a portion of Ecclesiastical History completed their studies in this department.

About two hundred sermons were preached in surrounding districts, during the year, and a number of families visited.

Four Lectures on the Pentateuch were delivered by Rev. Dr. Cramp, during the winter, in the Academy Hall before all the members of the three Institutions.

Rev. Dr. Pryor, having accepted the Pastorate of Granville Street Church, left the Institution on the first of May.