

A lame horse is a dead loss.

It costs as much to keep a lame horse, as it does a horse in harness — and the cripple brings nothing in. You can't afford to support idle stock. That's why you can't afford to be without

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Veterinary.

SORES ON TONGUE.

Steer has been failing for months. There are raw spots, the size of a penny, on root of tongue. The tongue is swollen, as are also the jaws. He salivates a great deal, and has difficulty in eating. I have noticed a heifer with the tip of her tongue affected in the same way. Is it contagious? J. R.

Ans.—The enlargement of the tongue and jaws indicate a form of actinomycosis, called wooden tongue, and it is doubtful if a case that has reached this stage will yield to treatment. Another animal eating food upon which he had salivated might contract the disease, if there were any abrasions on tongue or cheeks. Dress the sores with equal parts butter of antimony and tincture of myrrh, carefully applied with a feather once daily for three days; then gargle, twice daily, with a solution of alum, one ounce, to a pint of water. Give the iodide-of-potassium treatment, which consists in giving the drug three times daily. Commence with dram doses, and increase the dose by thirty grains daily until desire for food and water fail, tears run from his eyes, and his skin becomes scurfy. When any of these symptoms appear, cease giving the drug. If the case be simply aphtha, the local treatment will effect a cure. I think it would be wise to have both patients examined by a veterinarian, as the iodide-of-potassium treatment is not advisable except in cases of actinomycosis, and is expensive. V.

Miscellaneous.

COTTON-SEED AND OIL CAKE FOR CATTLE.

1. Is cotton-seed meal of any value to fatten cattle?
2. How much would be safe to feed to a two-year-old steer to have any effect?
3. Is oil cake any better?
4. For fattening lambs, how many oats should be fed?

Ans.—1. Yes; but it should be fed in combination with bran, chopped oats, silage or roots, as otherwise it has a constipating effect.

2. Two pounds daily to commence with, and increasing gradually to four pounds.

3. Yes; oil cake is better and safer and more economical, considering comparative cost; but, for best results, should be mixed with bran or oats.

4. One pint per day in two feeds to begin with, and increase to one quart per day at end of one month.

FEEDING SUGAR CANE TO HORSES.

Would like to know, through "The Farmer's Advocate," if sugar cane, cut up with oat or wheat straw, is good feed for idle horses in winter? Is it hard to digest, and does it get too dry when kept for a time? G. W. L.

Ans.—We have had no experience in feeding dried sugar cane to horses; but in those States where sorghum is largely grown, it is highly recommended as a food for horses. Whether it would become too dry for winter feeding is a matter upon which I am not altogether clear, but I should think that such a thing would not be likely. I would not recommend, however, cutting it and mixing it with cut straw, but think it would be safer to feed it uncut. In this way, the horses would masticate it more thoroughly, and there would be less danger of indigestion. In fact, I believe that the feeding of any bulky fodder uncut is safer for horses. G. E. The Shorthorn Society, of Great Britain, is to offer £1,010 in prizes at the shows of 1908. The Royal Agricultural Society has approved of the proposal to offer Shorthorn group prizes, but suggested that there should be two classes, and intimated a contribution of £10, if the Shorthorn Society gave a similar amount, for the additional class. This arrangement was agreed to. The classes at the Royal Show, at Newcastle will be for bull and three of his offspring, and cow and three of her progeny.
