

LIQUOR AND DRUG HABITS PERMANENTLY CURED

Without publicity or loss of time from business, by a purely vegetable, harmless home treatment.

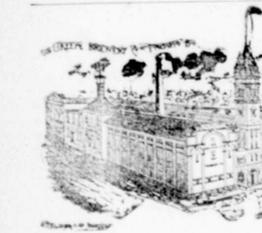

32 Years ago we started the manufacture of sheet metal building materials, and this long experience enables us to offer intending builders all that is desirable.

The Pedlar Metal Roofing Co. OHAWA, ONT.

YOU CAN IF YOU WISH. RESTORE THE SNAP, VIM, ENERGY AND STRENGTH YOU HAVE LOST.

Dr. Ward's Blood and Nerve Pills have been a great boon to my daughter Maggie. Prior to taking them she had been suffering from excessive nervousness for a long time, and her nerves were in a terribly shattered condition.

Dr. Ward's Blood and Nerve Pills have been a great boon to my daughter Maggie. Prior to taking them she had been suffering from excessive nervousness for a long time, and her nerves were in a terribly shattered condition.

THE O'KEEFE BREWERY COMPANY OF TORONTO Limited.

SPECIALTIES - High-Class English and Bavarian Hopped Ales, XXX Porter and Stout, Pilsener Lager of World-Wide Reputation.

Cobbett's "Reformation." Just issued a new edition of the Protestant Reformation, by Wm. Cobbett.

CANCER! Tumors and all Blood Disorders conquered; set out the vegetable treatment.

DR. WATSON, 57 TALBOT ST. LONDON, Ont. Specialties - Nervous Disorders.

DR. WOODRUFF, No. 18 Queen's Avenue, Defective vision, impaired hearing, nasal catarrh and indigestion treated.

LOVE & HIGAN, BARRISTERS, ETC., 415 Talbot St., London. Private funds on loan.

UNDERTAKING. JOHN FERGUSON & SONS, 180 King Street.

The Leading Undertakers and Embalmers. Telephone - House 37; Factory 34.

THE GUARDIAN'S MYSTERY

Rejected for Conscience's Sake. BY CHRISTINE FABER. CHAPTER XVII. - CONTINUED.

"Unexpected circumstances made her end her visit," "awfully sad and tired-looking," "made her lie down as soon as possible," "these were the statements that worked themselves into Mr. Mallaby's brain, and as they did so, the expression of his face changed to one of positive pain and anxiety."

"Do you think she is sick?" Even his voice seemed tremulous from anxiety. "No, I don't think she is sick, but I think she's unhappy some way. Just stay here, and I'll see if she's rested enough to come down to you."

Miss Hammond, unable to sleep, had remained in bed but a very short time, so that she was quite prepared to descend to Mr. Mallaby, and she rose at once from her pensive position by the window and accompanied Mrs. Denner to the parlor.

That good-looking but somewhat curious woman would like to have entered with the young lady, and it was with more than one sigh of regret she kept on her reluctant way to the kitchen.

Mr. Mallaby was standing just as Mrs. Denner had left him, the same anxious expression on his face, the same worried look in his eyes. Never, perhaps had even his ward observed that look so plainly before.

"Welcome, Miss Hammond," he said, his look changing to one of genuine relief and pleasure, as her appearance - she had forced a smile to her lips - seemed to deny the probability, at least of illness.

"And how have you come to us so unexpectedly?" shaking the hand she extended, and speaking playfully, as if to hide the evidence of much deeper feeling.

She told him in a few words of Florence's unexpected departure, and in order to account for any dejection she might in the future be unable to conceal, she told how acutely she felt that departure, and how she had loved each other as if they had been twin sisters.

Mr. Mallaby's boarders were few - owing as she said to the season of the year - comprising but four very staid gentlemen, and a couple of exceedingly deaf old ladies. The gentlemen breakfasted early, and did not return to lunch, and at the evening dinner seemed to pay an entire, and very solemn attention to their plates.

Thus, Miss Hammond, when she went to breakfast the next morning, found not such a public table as she had dreaded to meet. Mr. Mallaby sat next to her having the old ladies on the other side of him.

"Oh, Hartache," exclaimed the first, and "Hastate," chimed in the second, and then they both begged pardon together for having in the first instant so dreadfully misunderstood the name, and instantly fell to demanding of Mr. Mallaby the attentions that it was evident they were accustomed to receive from him, thus preventing him from making any further effort to correct them in the matter of his ward's cognomen.

"I am happy to meet you, Miss Hatter," "Hammond!" shouted Mr. Mallaby, his florid face growing more florid in his exertion to make the deaf old creatures hear.

"Oh, Hartache," exclaimed the first, and "Hastate," chimed in the second, and then they both begged pardon together for having in the first instant so dreadfully misunderstood the name, and instantly fell to demanding of Mr. Mallaby the attentions that it was evident they were accustomed to receive from him, thus preventing him from making any further effort to correct them in the matter of his ward's cognomen.

DR. CHASE'S REMEDIES. Some of their Remarkable Cures. E. J. Laskie, Dunnville, Ont. Cured of severe Kidney and Bladder Trouble by Chase's K-L Pills, a cure that created a name.

and she suddenly, and involuntarily felt an increased esteem for her guardian. "What will you do with yourself to-day, my dear?" he asked after the meal.

"I occupy the time with my books and my dear trunk has arrived, I shall have reading matter, and as there is a piano in the parlor, I shall not be at a loss for practice."

She spoke cheerfully enough, and he, not knowing that the cheerfulness was assumed, went to his daily avocation quite satisfied that with his pleasant occupation she would be neither lonely nor home-sick; but he kept thinking as he went down the street, what he should bring her when he returned.

Books and music, those were the things to which her tastes inclined. He remembered the time when his tastes were similarly inclined, and then he seemed to feel a sudden chill - a chill that made the perspiration which the heat of the morning had brought out upon his forehead to become as cold as if it were a death dew.

On Nassau street, and he set his face into the expression that reluctant debtors dreaded, and he caused his eyes to assume the hard, keen, persistent stare which few cared to encounter at the very door of his office.

He was evidently young from the absence of all down upon his face, and a certain infantile expression that denotes the spongy age; but he was small, and at the same time, as if he had been carefully brushed beaver on his head, and the bright blue of his broadcloth pantaloons, and swallow-tailed coat, made a very gaudy and absurdly attractive sight.

His feet were exceedingly small and encased in brilliantly polished boots, and it was evident from the admiring looks he frequently cast upon them that he regarded them as the most important portion of his very slim person. Certainly, from the shape of his head, and the expression of his short-chinned narrow face, the quantity of his brains must have been limited.

"That's my name," answered Mr. Mallaby in his gruff, business tone. "Well, then, boss, just let me preface my remarks by assuring you it is with no idle curiosity that I've approached you this morning for the purpose of saying that, while it may cause in you some emotions of displeasure, will on my part only come from a respect that is tempered by -"

"And I would only say that you are a consummate jackass!" came again from Mallaby, indignant that both his time and his temper should be thus trifled with.

"Oh, now boss, listen a minute while I preface my remarks by telling you that a letter came to you for me - I mean came to me for you - I mean came to both of us, and at that stage of his explanation he became so uncertain himself of what he did mean that he stopped short, turned very red in the face, looked down at his exquisite feet as if they might help him, and began to fumble in his breast-pocket.

"By that time, however, the strange-looking youth had produced a letter the broken seal of which showed that it had been opened, and in pulled Mr. Mallaby back and placed it in his hand.

"I thought the letter was for me, boss - my name's Mallaby - and I read it; then I thought it must be for you."

"The fork line in Mallaby's face died away to a ghostliness, and his hand shook violently as he opened the letter; it had been folded so as to make its own inclosure. Still, while he tremulously unfolded it, he endeavored to reassure himself by the fact that the penmanship was utterly unfamiliar; but the foreign postmarks upon it - those made his heart quake.

"I thought the letter was for me, boss - my name's Mallaby - and I read it; then I thought it must be for you."

"The fork line in Mallaby's face died away to a ghostliness, and his hand shook violently as he opened the letter; it had been folded so as to make its own inclosure. Still, while he tremulously unfolded it, he endeavored to reassure himself by the fact that the penmanship was utterly unfamiliar; but the foreign postmarks upon it - those made his heart quake.

Mallaby breathed more freely. There was nothing in the letter to reveal his secret; and if there had been he doubted his comprehension by the doll who had already shown it to some one of more intelligent, and more vivid comprehension than he himself possessed - his aunt, Prudence Liscome.

door to that of Mallaby, and hence the mistake that put into his hands on the previous day an epistle that he had hated him to read, it came from some members of his family to explain it. The only one who seemed able to do so was his aunt, and she, sagely concluding that it must be meant for somebody else, asked her nephew if there was anyone in the vicinity of his office who bore a similar name.

"Then he is the man," said his aunt, and having obtained from her nephew as full a description as the latter could give of Mr. Mallaby, her son was secretly gladdened by the thought that he must be the very Mallaby to whom she had been introduced, the guardian of his hated niece, and she felt that she should such be the case, and if that mysterious letter were really for him, what satisfactory consequences for herself might not follow.

Perhaps even the inclining to her favor matrimonially of Mr. Mallaby himself through that very letter which had fallen so strangely upon her hands, and he had, in his idiotic fear of having actually read a letter not intended for him, wanted to destroy it, and never breathe a word about it to anybody; but his aunt, in well-forged, virtuous horror, exclaimed violently at such a proposition.

Every day she experienced in numberless ways evidence of his watchful regard, and yet he seemed positively bashful in her presence, speaking but little, and always acting as if he feared he were guilty of some intrusion.

Sometimes she could not help being touched by it all, but often she was touched - touched to sudden tears by his rare, and woman-like gentleness. Nor was she long in ascertaining the devotion which he felt for her former half-contempted and always acting as if he feared he were guilty of some intrusion.

On that same morning, hardly an hour after the departure of young Mallaby, Anne, out on a domestic errand, made time to call upon Miss Liscome, and living to that lady, the parcel and note which were to have been given to Sydney Wilbur.

"I couldn't manage to give them, ma'am. Mr. Wilbur wasn't home at all on Friday, as you know yourself, and he was out on Saturday, so I couldn't get myself to take the parcel."

"And you couldn't get any chance?" "Oh, Anne," said Miss Liscome in a sort of dismayed disappointment, as she took back her gift.

"But you haven't mentioned it to Miss Wilbur, nor anybody," her dismay changed to a little to fear.

"No, ma'am; I never yet made a fool of myself, by meddling in things that didn't belong to me, or putting myself forward, and I hope I never shall. Good morning, ma'am."

And Anne faced immediately away and departed, thinking to herself as she went: "I wonder if the old creature took what I said."

But Miss Liscome took it no further than to think that Anne was rather impertinent, and to feel that only she was somewhat in the power of that domestic, who would like to have given her a good setting down; and then she went back to all the feelings engendered by the return of her charm.

Wilbur's look on the steamer when she had made that remark to him had caused her to doubt a little his acceptance of the gift; still, as Anne had not returned the preceding day, she had felt he must have taken it, and that fact consoled her not a little; now, however, to find it had not even been offered to him, she knew not whether to yield to disappointment because it had happened so, or to be glad that he had not the opportunity of rejecting it.

Miss Hammond tried to occupy herself with her books and music, taking from her trunk its little store of volumes - they were all either histories, philosophies, or religious works - and arranging them in convenient uses, and then returning to the same receptacle, a neatly-bound volume of music with which she repaired to the parlor. Mrs. Denner was there, having just finished her daily careful dusting of the apartment, and she assured the young lady she would not be disturbed by the entrance of anyone, the gentlemen all being out, and the old ladies engaged in knitting in their own room.

the notes as she played, and more than once instead of the music, she heard Wilbur's last words.

"You are merciless, Agnes!" And in spite of herself her thoughts would wander to the life of the two on ship-board, to the foreign shore to which they were going, to conjectures about Wilbur's future movements - whether he would remain with Florence and her mother, or go still further abroad; and then she longed with a sort of wild, fierce longing for the letter that Florence had promised to write on the steamer, and to post the first opportunity.

But so many days must elapse before she could receive it, that her heart sank, and it was only by beginning a wild, loud, brilliant passage of music, she managed to suppress a passionate burst of tears. When Mr. Mallaby returned to lunch - which it was only occasionally convenient for him to do, and which he did to-day, with a good deal of incoherence - he bore with him a package of books and music for his ward. The selection gave evidence of so much taste and culture, in such matters, that the young lady was further puzzled to understand his odd-looking guardian, while she had also not a little touched by the kind words which he usually manifested he turned away hastily, as if he were either offended or that he could not bear the exhibition of her gratitude.

Every day she experienced in numberless ways evidence of his watchful regard, and yet he seemed positively bashful in her presence, speaking but little, and always acting as if he feared he were guilty of some intrusion.

Sometimes she could not help being touched by it all, but often she was touched - touched to sudden tears by his rare, and woman-like gentleness. Nor was she long in ascertaining the devotion which he felt for her former half-contempted and always acting as if he feared he were guilty of some intrusion.

On that same morning, hardly an hour after the departure of young Mallaby, Anne, out on a domestic errand, made time to call upon Miss Liscome, and living to that lady, the parcel and note which were to have been given to Sydney Wilbur.

"I couldn't manage to give them, ma'am. Mr. Wilbur wasn't home at all on Friday, as you know yourself, and he was out on Saturday, so I couldn't get myself to take the parcel."

"And you couldn't get any chance?" "Oh, Anne," said Miss Liscome in a sort of dismayed disappointment, as she took back her gift.

"But you haven't mentioned it to Miss Wilbur, nor anybody," her dismay changed to a little to fear.

"No, ma'am; I never yet made a fool of myself, by meddling in things that didn't belong to me, or putting myself forward, and I hope I never shall. Good morning, ma'am."

And Anne faced immediately away and departed, thinking to herself as she went: "I wonder if the old creature took what I said."

But Miss Liscome took it no further than to think that Anne was rather impertinent, and to feel that only she was somewhat in the power of that domestic, who would like to have given her a good setting down; and then she went back to all the feelings engendered by the return of her charm.

Wilbur's look on the steamer when she had made that remark to him had caused her to doubt a little his acceptance of the gift; still, as Anne had not returned the preceding day, she had felt he must have taken it, and that fact consoled her not a little; now, however, to find it had not even been offered to him, she knew not whether to yield to disappointment because it had happened so, or to be glad that he had not the opportunity of rejecting it.

Miss Hammond tried to occupy herself with her books and music, taking from her trunk its little store of volumes - they were all either histories, philosophies, or religious works - and arranging them in convenient uses, and then returning to the same receptacle, a neatly-bound volume of music with which she repaired to the parlor. Mrs. Denner was there, having just finished her daily careful dusting of the apartment, and she assured the young lady she would not be disturbed by the entrance of anyone, the gentlemen all being out, and the old ladies engaged in knitting in their own room.

instruction, she was obliged to turn back in short order, the skirt of her dress being most violently plucked - it was in the admiring hands of the whole motley dozen.

She speedily convinced, even the Denners, privileged as they felt themselves to be, that she was not there for ornament, nor amusement, and when the hour for dismissal arrived she felt that the session had indeed been a time of distraction. Owing to the buzz about her, and the ceaseless vigilance required by her own restless and mischievous charges, she had not been able to yield for an instant to her wonted thoughts. She wondered a little, as tired and spiritless she wended her way home, whether she had not been premature in committing herself to such an uncongenial spiritual work, as this, her first experience of Sunday School teaching seemed to be. How much more pleasant would her books have been; but, with that thought her stronger, and better nature aroused itself; she felt her cheeks growing hot at the realization of her spiritual sloth and cowardice, and she began to walk very fast as if to atone by exertion for her past weakness.

There were pattering steps behind her, and she turned to behold her whole Sunday School class headed by the redoubtable Denners - to whom she had not even hinted the slightest desire of their company home - close in her rear. They had maintained a very respectable distance until Miss Hammond's accelerated gait put them off their guard, when in a sort of unconscious boldness they had increased their own pace until it suddenly brought them almost up to her. Their look of dismay at being detected was comical, and the way the more bashful ones endeavored to hide themselves behind their companions caused a scrambling that was ludicrous; even the dignified young lady had to laugh a little, and then her amusement gave place to wonder, as the whole pack encouraged by the Denners, rushed past her in pursuit of another object. That object was Mr. Mallaby, who, on his way home from church, was just turning a corner a whole block in advance of the party.

Miss Hammond slackened her gait, thankful that she was so near home, for she felt that Mr. Mallaby being speedily informed of her proximity, would wait for her not alone his own escort for the rest of the distance, but the attendance of the whole twelve children. He did not, however, linger a moment, when they reached him, and if the little ones told him he did not even look back to ascertain the proximity of his ward, but devoted himself at once, as he always seemed to do, to the childish interests about him. It was evident that the Denners had introduced their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the exceedingly friendly terms which immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that Mr. Mallaby was delighted with the immediately appeared to ensue, between all parties. They walked on each side of him trying to arrange themselves so that each one could get as near to him as possible, and whatever charm he used even the boisterousness of their companions, and that