COL. SNELL WAS INSANE.

l'illionaire Was Incompetent to Properly Dispose of Fortune.

Many Women After the Aged Millionaire's Wealth.

One Woman Used Daughter as Bait For the Old Man.

Clinton, Ill., July 16.—The third contest over the will of Col. Thomas Snell, the eccentric old man who died leaving an estate of $2,000,000 and cutting his only son off with an annuity of $50, was ended to-day, when a jury decided that Col. Snell was insane at the time he made the will.

This decision sets aside the bequest of several thousand dollars to Mabelle Snell McNamara, the aged colonel's affinity and favorite grandniece.

The jury was out a little more than an hour and took but one ballot, which resulted eleven to one for the contesting son, Richard Snell. The dissenting juror changed his vote without the formality of a second ballot.

The first trial of the contest resulted in a verdict that Col. Snell was insane, Clinton, Ill., July 16 .- The third con

The first trial of the contest resulted in a verdict that Col. Snell was insane, but a higher court set aside the verdict and remanded the case for another trial. If the will had stood the legal heirs would have received, all told, annuities aggregating $5,000, and not exceeding $1,000 in any single case, while the residue of the fortune would have been held in a weird trust agreement for heirs yet unborn.

On the date set for a final distribution, in the terms of the will, the estate tion, in the terms of the will, the estate would have grown probably to $100,000-The Snell will case will go down in erican court annals as furnishing on the most amazing instances of the depths to which women have descended to gain money.

The most sensational feature of all three hearings of the case was the introduction of letters from nearly a score of women, young and old, all of whom professed to love the aged millionaire cater to a degenerate tendency which appeared to be one of Col. Snell's senile vagaries, the women interlarded their letters with unprintable obscenitheir letters with unprintable obscent-ties. The more vulgar the tone of the letters the better pleased the old man appeared to be, and it was found when the letters were exposed that he had formed the habit of marking them with keen enjoyment of a couple of the worst examples of his grand niece, Mabelle Snell McNamara's correspondence.

Scarcely a letter was written to the doting old man by any of the women which did not demand gifts and money.

"Send me my senskin coat right away, you old dear." "I need a lot of money. Send me as much as you can spare, and I will love you to death when I see you again." "I will need at least $1,000, dear old baby. Send it right away," were some of the requests, and it appeared that Col. Snell hearkened to the requests and sent the money, for almost every letter demanding more cash contained effusive thanks for past remittances.

One of the most pitiful instances One of the most pitiful instances of the respect-deartoying glamor which Col. tells' wealth seen, it to shed over women who thought they might separate m from some of it was furnished by a stor named John A. Hamilton, who nnived with his wife to use their 15-aar-old daughter, Eelna Hamilton, as a tit to lure gold from the aged millionre.

Col. Shell had been a friend of the Hamilton family from Eelna's bablyhood, and she was a well-grown girl when her parents noticed the change that had come over the old man and his insane fondness for the adulation of women and and promising that she and Eelna would "show him a good time."

Later Belna's parents had the girl write the old man loving, girlish letters, which appeared to have been dictated by an older head than hers. As a result of this playing on Col. Snell's suspectibilities the Hamiltons succeeded in getting from him several thousand dollars. $1. of the Snell millions and took refuge in Biloxi, Miss., where they were located and persuaded to admit Belna's part in the quest for gold. More than a score of Clinton women

More than a score of Clinton women are known to have written similar letters to Col. Snell, but as these were not considered essential to the case they were never introduced into the trials, and it was announced later that they would be burned. This announcement lifted a great load from the minds of many women high in Clinton social life.

The following resolution was intro duced at a meeting of the Trades and Labor Council of Kingston on Thursday night, and carried by a unanimous vote:

Labor Council of Kingston on Thursday night, and carried by a unanimous vote:

"That the Trades and Labor Council of the city of Kingston, here assembled, learns with regret of the contemplated removal from the city of ex-Mayor Dr. John H. Bell. During the municipal career of Dr. Bell, extending about eleven years, two years of which he served as chief magistrate of the city, we have always found him an ardent supporter of organized labor, and the workingmen in general always found him a triend in time of need, ready and swilling to give up his valuable time when called upon to advance their interests or espouse their cause. He was loved as a friend, respected as a citizen, admired as a man of sterling qualities, and we feel that Kingston is called upon to part with one, in the person of Dr. J. H. Bell, whose departure will leave a vacancy in our city that will be difficult to fill. And now, in the name and by the authority of this Trades and Labor Council, we desire to place on record our appreciation of Dr. Bell's valuable assistance and timely advice in all matters that pertained to the general welfare of the workingmen of the city, and at the same time assure him that he will ever occupy a place in the hearts of all citizens, who are called upon to earn their bread by the sweat of their brow. Be it, therefore, resolved, that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Dr. Bell, inscribed upon our minutes, and published in the city press."

The police were then going after Porteous when Clark made them understand that the man they were holding was the culprit. Ack-nowledging their error, they took charge of the man, who turned out to be no other than Mark Tompkins, the famous high wayman, who completed a term of highwayman, who completed a term of ten years for a similar offence about two years ago.

When Mr. Porteous left his two When Mr. Porteous left his two friends he walked to the side gate and had just stepped inside when he received a vicious blow on the head from a 2x4 inch scantling. Fortunately it glanced off his hat, but before he had time to face his assailants he was struck beneath the rim of his hat, this time with a billy. Even this second blow left him conscious, and he had turned to run pull of the gate when a third, blow conscious, and he had turned to run out of the gate when a third blow brought him to his knees. Knowing that his friends were near he began to yell for help, while his assailants continued to pelt him over the shoulders and head. They could not hush his cries, however, and, taking fright, they attempted to escape in the manner narrated above.

Tompkins was taken to the cans and locked up, and Porteous went home to examine himself and see how much he xamine himself and see how much he as damaged. When seen yesterday by Times reporter he seemed little theoryse for his encounter beyond a bruised ack, and a general uncomfortable stiffness. The sum of money he carried was arge, Saturday having been an unusually harge, catterday having been an unusually busy day.

Tompkins is a noted criminal, and nearly half his life has been spent in prison. Thirteen years ago he got into a scrape which sent him to Kingston for ten years. Mr. John Cauley, cashier of the Tuckett Cigar Company, was walking on Queen street near York with a grip full of momer, which he had just grip full of money, which he had just drawn from the bank to pay the em-ployees of the firm, when Tompkins and a fellow named Mike Horn knocked him a fellow named Mike Horn knocked him senseless with a billy and ran off with the grip. They were caught, convicted, and sentenced to ten years. As the result of the beating which he received at their hands Mr. Cauley suffered a long and severe illness, and has not even yet fully recovered his atrength. Only a short time ago he was thinking of going to a specialist in Buffelo to be operated upon to a specialist in Buffalo to be operated upon.

After his release from jail Tompkins returned to this city, and lately had been working as a moulder, and was keeping company with a young woman. The police kept an eye on him for some time, but he behaved himself and seemed to have reformed. The address he gave at the police station was Locke street south. His age he gave as 27, but he is believed to be almost ten years older than that.

It is thought that the two thugs intended to crack the safe in Porteous' store, but, seeing him put the money in his pocket, changed their plans and decided to lay for him behind the side entrance gate. There can be no doubt that they were aware his friends had just passed up the street and were within easy call, but it is likely they intended to strike their victim so hard the first time that he would not be able to call out.

time that he would not be able to call out.

Who Tompkins' partner in crime was is not known, but with a fair description the police have their suspicions, and an early arrest is expected.

When Tompkins was arraigned before Magistrate Jelfs at the Police Court this morning he asked for a three-days' remand to enable him to secure counsel. Crown Attorney Washington was willing, but asked that it be made a week. The Magistrate granted the week's enlargement.

Some days ago Mr. Beckett met a man driving into Owen Sound from Meaford. The Inspector got suspicious and halted him, making inquiries concerning liquor. The man denied any knowledge of any of the stuff, but the Inspector decided to search the rig. Under a receptacle, the inspector found a galvanized metal wessel, twhmty-fixed inches long by seventeen wide, and seven deep, filled with whiskey. The driver's name was Thomas Porter, but the buggy was not his own, and as he he buggy was not his own, and as he the ouggy was not his own, and as he claimed that he had no knowledge of what the vessel contained, but was merely delivering it, Magistrate Rutherford, before whom the matter was laid, took no action against him. The liquor was confiscated.

The creditors and the management had a meeting and it was arranged that a number of local men should take a hand in conducting the affairs of the park. The result will be that everything will now go along in ship shape and the local men interested will do all in their power to make the park boom. It is felt that the public will patronize the place more now to encourage a live institution which was intended from the start to put Hamilton on an equality with other big cities by giving it an amusement park to which it could point with pride and to which the citizens and visitors could go at all times for wholesome amusement. Last week the park was well patronized and on Saturday night there was a bumper crowd. It is expected, however, that business will pick up in real earnest this week.
