PRESIDENT-ELECT WILSON, THE "HUMAN" MAN BROKE COLLAR BONE HYDRO COMMISSION

NEWMAN TELLS A BUNCH OF ANECDOTES ABOUT THE whoop. PRESIDENT-ELECT—GRIEVES HIM THAT PEOPLE THINK HE'S "A STIFF OLD ASS."

By Oliver P. Newman.

Written for The Advertiser. At one of Governor Wilson's pre-election meetings I overheard the conversation between two women in the crowd that stormed the candidate as he entered and left the hall. "Did you get to shake hands with him?" "Yes, and it was no trouble at all. Did you?" "You bet. He just reached right out, smiled and shook hands. Why, he's just like anybody

No incident illustrates more strikingly the pre vailing opinion of the personality of Woodrow Wilson and the actual fact of his unconventional, genial nature. When he began his campaign, most people pictured him as a reserved, cold-blooded, aristocratic individual. The fact is, he's about as "human" as it is possible to imagine a man to be. "It grieves me terribly," he once said to me, to realize that there are a lot of people who think that merely because I've been a college professor, I'm a stiff old ass who doesn't know anything."

One day Wilson was making a speech from the rear of his car in Indiana when a switch engine jolted the train a rod or two. Quick as a flash

Wilson said with a smile: Woodrow Wilson. "I don't like to talk from a shifty platform, I'd rather talk on a platform that stays put-like the platform constructed at

Coming through New England one night, Wilson's train stopped, and a crowd in the half-lights of the station called for him. He stepped onto the rear platform and somebody cried:

This is Waterbury, governor." The candidate shot back: "That's all right; my watch is wound up."

that the President-Elect. One of the most effective in the recent campaign and get plain, downright, naturally was his illustration of how he licked the bosses in New Jersey.

"It did not require courage to fight the bosses," he said, "after the people of New Jersey had instructed me to do it, and after the bosses had discovered that I would do what I said I would. It was usually not necessary to do it after saying I intended to do it. It was like Davy Crockett and the coon. You know, when the coon saw Davy had a bead on him, he said: 'Don't shoot, Mr. Crockett; I'll come down.' '.

Wilson also enjoys a good story, for the election had been left to the memthe story's sake, and is pretty sure to bers of the Denver Press Club, Wilson tell one or two during any general conversation to which he is a party. One of the best he has told recently is Mountain newspapermen that they're sort. Instead of taking him to a quiet talking about him yet. The crowd at on his brother college president, Had-

She reproved him severely and les got better and better, and Wilson sent him into the yard. He went out and his hosts got friendlier and melon to the street and happened to meet an old lady, to whom he said: The president of Yale will not take his accustomed bath today.' "The old lady was astonished. The boy piped out again: 'The president of Yale will not take his accustomed bath ing three or four such drinks Wilson heavy offerings of 3,000 head.

When Wilson returned from the trip on a sailing yacht, where he wrote his letter of acceptance of the Democratic nomination, he produced the following limerick, prompted by a week on the wish that my room had a floor, I don't care so much for a door, But this walking around Without touching the ground

Is getting to be such a bore.

The President-elect's full name is Thomas Woodrow Wilson," but he has not used the "Thomas" since soon after he left college. People who didn't know this were therefore astonished when, at Gary, Ind., as the Democratic candidate stepped onto a platform to make a speech, a stout man jumped up. rushed over to him, hammered him on the back, and yelled:

"Helle, Tommy; how are you?" "Tommy" was equally surprised, but he pumped the fat man's hand up and down, laughed happily, and exclaim-

"Why, hello, Bob; what are doing here? My, but I'm glad to see Bob was an old, old friend, ex-Gov. Glenn, of North Carolina.

But President-Elect Wilson is not always the genial, good-natured man indicated by these stories. His "humanness" is complete. He has a tem per. Usually, he keeps it pretty well under control but be's fust enough like other folks to lose it sometimes during his campaign.

In one city he was halted by a re eption committee in the lobby of a notel, to wait a few minutes until the reception committee of another organizaion took him in charge. He had been naking 10 or 15 speeches a day, travelling for a week on a train, subjecting himself to being crushed by crowds, would have been chosen unanimously, shaking hands with both hands for of good health. The proposal aroused unusual interest in the .House, and the debate followed non-party lines. Premier Asquith and a majority of the Government ministers opposed the amendment, but many Liberals supported it Arthur J. Balfour, the former Unionist leader in the House, and Bonar Law, the present House leader, supported the amendment, and, contrariwise, many Unionists opposed it. The bulk of the Irish Nationalists were opposition to it, but Timothy Healy was in favor of it. The Laborite members also supported Mr. Snowden's amendment. However, the amendment was rejected by a vote of 314 to 141.

Simultaneously a big women's demonstration was held at Albert Hall to demand the inclusion of women in among the many prominent people who telegraphed their entire sympathy. Lord Robert Cecil moved the New York, Nov. 5 .- In the belief of W. Morgan Shuster, former treasurer-general of Persia, the Balkan war and its attendant diplomatic complications is ikely to prove a great boon to Russia's ulet campaign for the control of Persia. "It is the Czar's opportunity to hasten the proclamation of his sovereignty over Persia," declares Mr. Shuster. "This Russian sovereignty has for months existed in fact if not in appearance. Russia has been quietly filling up the country with her own troops until now there is a force adequate to cope with any situation that may arise.

"England has been playing for Russia's moral support all along in the European situation, and the result has been that Russia has been forcing Eng-land's hand in Persia more and more, until now nothing remains to take place but a formal acknowledgment of Russia's sovereignty by the civilized powers."
