tract ladies to glove exhibitions. His idea is that a joint exhibition and lecture on the science of sparring would be listened to with interest. He would have a good lecturer tell the story of the rise, growth and fail of pugli-ism, and by means of storeoptic or other views, illustrate interesting events in the ring. At intervals throughout the lecture Suilvan and some other boxer of reputation would appear in costume, put on the gloves and show, in a ring set upon the stage, how old-time battles were won and lost, describing the effects of blows, and giving a general idea of the principles of scientific sparring. Sui-livan is being urged by friends to give the idea a trial in Boston.

few comical-looking acrobatic perform-ances. The second bird which came upon the scene was the largest one and the fleetest. It did get over the ground in quick order—a regular Jay-Rye-See trot. One of the horsemen took after it and around the ring a couple of times they went, the horse galloping and the bird going on an easy run, getting over the 5 ound by strides of about five feet. The three birds afforded much amuse-ment, but not so much as when they were be-ing driven out to their stables again. The birds wouldn't go out the narrow gates and through the long passage lined with small boys wanting to yet a closer look at them. The men in charge of the exhibition sur-rounded the birds and drove them to the gates, gradually closing around them. Will the birds go out?
