Dr. Schaffner is building on the lot purchased from Dr. Hall. The site is one of the finest in town, the back view as well as the front, being considered.

We hear that some of our best musical folk are about to denote some of their spare hours to the cultivation of their talents. We shall hope for rich results.

More April showers and more Mayflowers. The trees are coming on rapidly, and some of the fields are already beautifully green. The writer just picked some timothy a trifle over sixteen inches high.

Mr. C. W. Leonard, a younger brother of Dr. Leonard, won a agold medal for "crowns," and honorable mention for "plates" in the same class with Mr. V. Schaffner, who, I am told did his best work in another department.

B. F. Leonard, M.D., who has recently completed an under-graduate course in medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, Md., arrived here May 1st on a visit to his friends. He is looking lst on a visit to his friends. He is looking very well, and, we hear, intends taking a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins University. Congratulations, Dr. Leonard! One of the most note-worthy improvements of the kind at Lawrencetown this spring is that nearing completion at the Elm House. An ell sixty feet in length has been added. This contains a spacious bath-room, etc., a large window for flowers, and five guest rooms, commanding a fine view of the most beautiful part of our naturally beautiful little town. Improvements have also been made in stairways, approaches, diningroom etc., and we think it would be hard to find a more obliging host and hostess than o find a more obliging host and hostess than Mr. and Mrs. Whitman, or Mr. and Mrs. Oswald. Success treads on the heels of oted to the ten lower grades, where stly belongs, the advantages to the education in general, and of educacause of education in general, and of educa-tion at Lawrencetown in particular would be greatly benefitted. The course suggested by the writer of that article,—who, ovident-ly was no educationist with any serious theoretical or experimental knowledge of his subject—without a corresponding increase of teaching accomodation would be simply an educational crime. This, herein, is my main thesis, which, if necessary, I am pre-pared to defend before any sane and intelli-gent audience in the land.

The sad event following so closely the death of his sister-in-law Mrs. Robert Marshall in Clarence, a most estimable woman and justly beloved, and later in Bridgetown, his brother Edward, leaves a vacancy in the family circles that never can be filled. Red River Flood Sufferers.

Winnipeg, Man., April 30.—The relief steamer 'Assinaboine' returned yesterday from up the river points. Yesterday above Morris there were several applications for supplies from people living in the flooded district. Many stories of hardship were teld, one man and his family had lived for two days in their one-story house with two feet of water on the floor. They were able to escape owing to the high water. In a house in which three to five families were living together sickness had broken out among the children and on account of their being so many mouths to feed provisions had run short. It was to people in such circumstances that most of the supplies were given. The water is stationary here to-day.

Transvaal Raid.

London, April 30.—The Parliamentary Committee, which has been enquiring into the Transvaal raid, resumed its sessions to-day in the committee room of Westminster Hall. The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, made a statement under oath, declaring in the most explicit manner that neither himself nor his colleagues in the Colonial Office had, until the day before the raid, the slightest suspicions of anything in the nature of an armed invasion of the Transvaal.

Trees are sacred in England, especially those which were planted, or have been nurtured, by the direction of Royalty. Looking out from Windsor Castle, at George IV.'s Gateway, between York and Lancaster Towers, we see before us probably as fine an avenue of Elms as exists anywhere. These were planted in the days of Charles II. It is a charming drive, with footpaths on each side beneath double rows of elms. Upon Snow Hill, across a vale three miles

We regret to chronicle the death of Mr. Hiram Marshall, which took place in Halifax on the 22nd of April. He was formerly a resident of Clarence, and owned the farm now occupied by Mr. W. Crisp, on Leonard street. His first wife was Miss Porter, of whom two sons survive; one a resident of the United States, and the other Mr. R. E. The last occasion was during the plague in London, when parlia-ment was adjourned from Westminister. In 1314, one Nicholas-At-Oke, a farmer near ment was adjourned from Westminister. In 1314, one Nicholas-At-Oke, a farmer near by, presented a petition to parliament asking to be reimbursed for a quantity of oats, which the King's (Edward II.) servants had taken forcibly for the benefit of the King's chickens. He was awarded 23 lis. 4d.

It was in Berkshire also that the great Reformation had some of its most noteworthy beginnings. Newbury, up the Vale of the Kennet, about 25 miles in a westerly direction from Windsor, was the scene of touching martyrdoms for the cause of religious liberty. Christopher Shoemaker was burnthere in 1518 for reading the Testament to one of his scholars. Julius Palmer, an inquirer, was suspected of heresy. He resigned his position of Fellow of Magdalen College. He was then hunted from place to place, and in one of his flights he went to bis mother at Ensham (another Berkshire town) for consolation. She for cheer cursed him, and told him to believe as his fathers. "Faggots I have to burn thee" said she, "more though gettest not from me." As he sorrowfully left his intolerant mother's presence, to go to his doom, she threw an old Palmer—"I say that it standeth with God's word, and therefore ought of necessity to be retained in the church.

Jeffery—"Ye have forgotten yourself I wis, for ye write that children may be saved without it.

Palmer—"Yea, Mr. Doctor, God willing."

Jeffery—"Note it Registrar."

Parson—"Thou art as forward a heretic as ever I talked withal."

The trial goes against Palmer. Arguments go for nothing, and fire and faggots must end the dispute. Sir Richard Abridges, Knight Sheriff of Berks, makes an effort to save him, but since he will not recant for "meet and drink and wife and farm," which Sir Richard offers with a real desire to save him, nothing can be done. The Chronicler describes the execution of this awful mockery thus:

About a quarter-mile from Newbury, at the "Sand Pits," on the Enborn Road, the traveller is shown the spot where was witnessed this awful shame of the Christian Church.

Newbury has its castle near by. Donnington Castle stands upon a hill overlooking Newbury, the Vales of Kennet and Lambourn. Riohard II., during his minority, with his guardian, Sir Richard Abbesbury, occupied this castle, which is now but a small block of ruin. Shortly after it became the possession of the Chaucers. It is claimed by some, though disputed by others, that many of Geoffery Chaucer's poems were written under the then magnificent oaks of Donnington. Of the famous Donnington trees, Evelyn says in his "Discourse on Forest Trees," "amongst which three were most remarkable from the ingenuous planter (if tradition hold), the famous English bard, G. Chaucer, of which one was called the King's, the other the Queen's, and a third Chaucer's oak. The first was 50 feet in height before any bough or knot appeared, and cut 5 foot square at the butt end, all clean timber. The Queen's was felled since the war, and held 40 foot excellent timber, as straight as an arrow in growth and grain, and cutting 4 foot at the stub, and near a yard at the top. The oak was of a kind so excellent, cutting a grain clear as any clapboard (as appeared in the wainscott which was made thereof), that a thousand pities 'its some seminary of acorns had not been propagated to preserve the species. It is a delightfully calm, clear, salubrious day in May when the writer visits Windsor Castle. Nature is favoring us with weather, as it has this residence of sovereigns with variegated scenery, hill and dale, park and forest, and delightful river.
