"Dear Old Chap," it ran, "you will be surprised to know I am in New York. Just ran up for a few days on important business. My reason for looking you up, after all this time, is to call your attention to a first-rate thing I saw down street to-day. "That'll fit Robinson to a T,' I said, the minute I clapped eyes on it. You see I haven't forgotten what a progressive fellow you always were. I enclose their card. The makers claim it will do the thing up brown, and I guess there's no doubt they've hit a fine thing. Better send them a fiver and try it. The beauty of it is it can be so easily repaired if tever gets out of trim. I think the fellow told me they sent a repairing outfit along with it. Hope all the folks are well. Yours, as of old,

"If a 'fiver' is five dollars, and I suppose it must be, isn't that a good deal to—to risk, Billy?" "Who's going to risk it, Cornelia?

Wouldn't little women better leave ousiness to great, big men?" He laughed good-naturedly. The friendly letter had cheered him up after a hard day in the fields. Farming was new business to Billy and a severe test to his untrained city muscles. It was his pride in his "stock" that was tiding him over initial discouragements. He took the card out of the letter and scanned it again, curiously.

Cabbage Patch" attained a considerable notoriety a year or two ago. It seems that the original of the famous "Mrs. Wiggs" is generally understood to be a certain Mrs. Mary Bass, of Louisville, Ky. Perhaps the Mrs. Bass temper as the Mrs. Wiggs of romance or it may be that Mrs. Bass has been subjected to trials of patience before which even the serenity of the heroine of the "Cabbage Patch" would have succumbed. At all events it appears that the notoriety into which Mrs. Bass has been brought through the popularity of "Mrs, Wiggs" has brought upon her an affliction of visitation so intolerable that Mrs. Bass felt herself driven to take measures to defend herself from the people who at all hours invaded her domestic kingdom eager to get sight of the wonder of "Mrs. Wiges of the Cabbage Patch." In pursuance of this defensive policy, Mrs. Mary Bass, it is charged, emptied the contents of a slop jar upon a cer-Mrs. Emily Smith, also of Louisville Ky., to the damage of that lady's attire and still more to the damage of her temper. Mrs. Smith accordingly brought suit against Mrs. Bass. The court, however, dismissed the case against Mrs. Bass, holding that in view of all the circumstances she had suffered provocation which went iar to justify the inhospitable reception she had accorded to Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Bass' testimony given before the court is reported as follows: "For many months, years, I've been continually interrupted- Hobo after hobo comes to my house.
