Pointed Paragraphs

If there ever was a fool killer he must have retired from business. When one boy sees another eating something he always gets hungry.

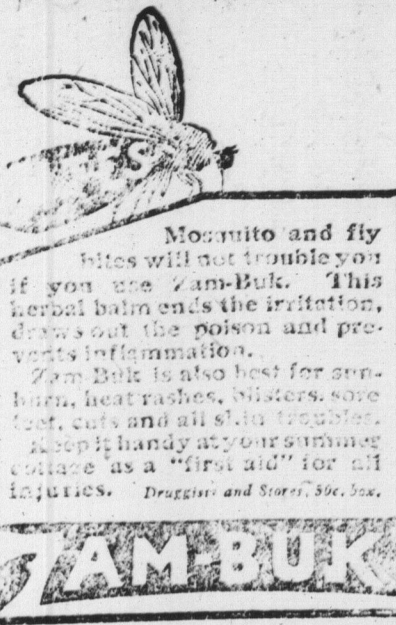

Normal Weight

Perhaps you are worried because your child does not pick up in weight? Better try and watch how it helps make a thin child grow and put on weight. There is nothing quite so strengthening as Scott's Emulsion for a child of any age.

Scott's Emulsion

A Trail Across the Rockies

(1) In the Sinclair Canyon at the Red Gate. (2) Fording the Vermillion River.

The first trip over the Simpson Pass through the Canadian Pacific Rockies was made by Sir George Simpson, Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, in 1841, and formed part of the first recorded overland route round the world, that is to say across the North American Continent, and by way of Siberia and Russia, occupying about nine months, and the subject of a considerable literature. Jim Brewster, the famous guide and outfitter at Banff, discovered the fallen tree on the summit of the Pass on which the travellers left their record.

Fired by the ambition to cross this pass, I set out one day this summer, with two guides, ten ponies and camping outfit and supplies for six or seven days. Jim Brewster set these over from Banff to Invermere, where I had to cross the Columbia River, where I got across—else how could this tale have ever been told? As we approached the Summit of the Pass, one grizzly left a visiting card such as grizzlies do leave—scattered up on the trail and again we saw deer. The Summit, according to the guides, should be ten feet deep in snow, and the description given by Sir George Simpson gave the same anticipation: "We were surrounded by peaks and crags on whose summits lay perpetual snow; and the only sounds which disturbed the solitude were the crackling of prostrate branches under the tread of our horses, and the roaring of the stream as it leaped down its rocky course."

About seven hours of hard work brought us to the height of land, the hinge as it were between the eastern and western waters. We breakfasted on the level isthmus, which did not exceed fourteen paces in width, filling our kettles for big game judging by the tracks we saw and the animals we even met. Two black bear and a deer on the trail with moose paths worn deep like small Devonshire lanes along the meadows beside the river. The Kootenay River had a rather bad reputation. Two parties were drowned in the attempt to make the crossing at the same time last year, and we ourselves had been warned to postpone our trip. However, we found a ford where we did not even have to swim our horses, and next day were on the banks of the Vermillion River. Into the Vermillion pours the raging torrent of the Simpson, which itself is fed from the melting glaciers of the snow-capped Rockies high above. At least one cyclone seemed to have swept down its valley, and the river itself had washed away several corners so that our trail had to be made, or found anew on many a mile. Once while Ed. Dawson, the leading guide was hacking a trail through a deadfall, his saddle pony took it into its head to cross the torrent. The packponies followed, suit, and before we could stop them, supplies were on the wrong side of the most vicious looking water I ever saw. There was nothing to be done but follow, and evidently we got across—else how could this tale have ever been told? As we approached the Summit of the Pass, one grizzly left a visiting card such as grizzlies do leave—scattered up on the trail and again we saw deer. The Summit, according to the guides, should be ten feet deep in snow, and the description given by Sir George Simpson gave the same anticipation: "We were surrounded by peaks and crags on whose summits lay perpetual snow; and the only sounds which disturbed the solitude were the crackling of prostrate branches under the tread of our horses, and the roaring of the stream as it leaped down its rocky course."
