

In 1823 Alexander Chewett was Benchet, John Cartwright was Treasurer, Robert B. Sullivan, Solicitor, and William A. Campbell, Prothonotary. Mr. Chewett, the youthful Benchet, delivered a learned address, which may be read in Mr. Read's "Lives of the Judges."

Many of these young men became well known in Canadian history and it is interesting to find them here as fledgings learning the use of the powers by which they were to attain places in the land.
