public works and the general develope ment of the country, including statutory payments. An Irish fund, therefore, to the amount of a little over $20,000,000 annually, would be created. The Irish fund would be paid into a special Irish treasury to be created by an order-in-council and having an Irish treasurer at its head. The council would have the power to appoint or remove the officers of eight departments mentioned above, but the rights of the existing officers would be preserved. Religious Beliefs.

Under the bill any British subject would be able to hold the office of lord lieutenant without preference for any, religious belief. A clause was also included providing that no preference, whatever shall be shown to any religious denomination in appointments, and that any resulting from such preference shall be valid.
