Six days have we labored—as written—and to-morrow we give Him praise, b guided our footsteps-mine at least-through six not profitless days; Praise for the gleanings we gather from Him who was manger born, Who muzzleth not the oxen that treadeth His fields of corn; Praise for the gleaning of all these lands-Parson, think what it means-Eighty millions of toiling folk, and after them-one who gleans! Gleanings of grain from the swollen sack the sower hath saved for seed, Gleanings of gain from the gold we loan to the husbandman in need, Gleanings of wheat from the ripened fields, gleanings from stock and bin, From freight car, warshouse, market place—Lordl were it not a sin ... To doubt Thy word, I'd venture that the story of Boaz and Ruth Was written by one who didn't know-or misunderstood the truth. For, look-If this Ruth were told to go and glean to her heart's content (As I do here), and the servants warned she was free to follow her bent Over and over the Boaz Ranche, gleaning, well, doesn't it stand To reason that at the end of the year, though Boaz might own the land,

She'd have the wheat and the cash and the cows and everything else in sight, With a mortgage at ten per cent. clapped down on that reckless Caananite? M'm! I think that's why he married her-or at least that's what I'd say If I didn't know that the Word was true-and so-well, anyway I'd rather be Ruth with her gleaning thrift than Sheba with all her wealth; It's thrift that counts, and the habit of doing good things (and people) by stealth Stealth-and judgment-like Joseph had when he ran the price of wheat Plumb up to the price of a body and soul! For look, when you've nought to eat, You'll traffic your wife, your child and yourself, for bread. No, I don't mean you. I'm thinking of those old Israelites and some Anglo-Saxons, to Joseph-he knew; but there's others. Parson, you'll see next week Some amateur Josephs busted—a Philadelphia clique Have strained their credit a trifle in Bulling wheat for May, Thinking the Shorts are a lot of Lambs-they'll learn, when they come to pay. I'll trim them for over a million, and I'll give you that hundred thou. You wanted for foreign missions. No, don't you thank me now; Wait till you've got the money, good, hard gold, in your bank, One who is greater far than I, who am nothing but moistened clay, Old and frail and erring, but keeping my feet in the way Set by the Major Prophets, the Levites, and all of them Whose shoe latchets were most unworthy to touch His garment's hem.
What's that? Twelve o'clock striking? Parson, I'll bid you good-night; I'd offer a cup of coffee, but I don't believe it's right To set an example of working and breaking the Sabbath day, Six days is enough for labor, and, besides, it doesn't pay To take no rest in the Vineyard. Parson, it's my belief If the Lord had'nt set the Sabbath to give His servants relief, And we kept on straining our talents, and watching the other chaps, We'd most of us go clean crazy—or get into jail, perhaps. Well, no, I was only joking. A funny state of affairs 'Twould be if we got to jailing the country's millionaires. But I'm glad of a Sunday morning that I don't have to play the game, And I thank the Lord that my gleanings keep coming in just the same interest, rents and rebates, they run like a pipe of oil. Smoothly and automatic, with no Sabbath breaking toil.

And it's mighty cheering on Monday when I rise from my humble bed, When I kneel (as I make a habit) to pray for my daily bread,
